RUDY VALLEE
What! Another Cameraman?

Resplendently attired, but unusually frigid toward his public, Crooner Rudy Vallee appeared briefly in central court today to be arraigned on a charge of striking Benedict Fitzgerald, Boston news photographer.

Because of illness of Fitzgerald, Vallee's case was continued to April 21.

The crooner earned himself a nappy retort from the court when he asked that a specific hour be set for his next appearance, so that

A. LIES SEEK U.S. LOAN TO PAY DEBTS

London, April 17—Great Britain, France and the United States are engaged in secret negotiations with the view of selling the defaulted war debts by raising a gold bond issue in America, it has been learned here.

A tentative stage has been reached in which the negotiators believe a satisfactory return, other international factors necessary before they can proceed further.

Experts of three countries are studying methods of scaling down the amounts owed to a lump sum which Britain and France agree to pay.

The British steel industrialist, Lord Reordale, made a statement in New York last Wednesday proposing that Britain borrow dollars on 50-year bonds to be floated in the United States. Payments of principal and interest on the overdue debt after the amount had been reduced.

This statement was the first trial balloon to feel out American public reaction to the general scheme of scaling down the debts, which

Girl Friend Tells of Bandit Love

HELEN FRANCES HEAD
"He Refused to Explain Police Hunt"

By JOHN W. ENGLISH

"I loved him . . . I loved him! How could he have deceived me in this manner?"

Sobbing and heartbroken, 28-year-old Helen Frances Head of Lincoln street, Merrimac, kept saying these words over and over again as she told me in detail of her love and romance with William Elbridge Dickens, slain bandit.

Seated in her home as she brushed away her tears, she told how they had grown up together, played together as children, started "going steady," and above all that he was always a "model gentleman."

Disillusioned, her dreams of happiness shattered, she told a story that started with hope and ended in tragedy—his death at the hands of a Brighton police officer.

HE HAD PROPOSED

She began:

"I loved him, I loved him. I regarded him as one of the finest young men I had ever met.

"While I was not formally engaged to marry him we talked of marriage and I hoped some day to become his wife. He proposed marriage to me and I told him

She was placed under the immediate care of a physician, who had been summoned by other members of the family.

Newton assessors today announced an increase of 40 cents over last year's tax rate. The 1937 rate is $28.40.

The increase is attributable to a new bookkeeping system required by state law, John W. Murphy, chairman of the assessors, stated. This year the state is requiring Newton to set aside its surplus of $220,000 as a reserve fund against unpaid taxes, he said.

U. S. SPEEDS BOSTON SECURITY UPSET TO HIGH COURT

APPEAL MAY BE HEARD BEFORE SPRING RECESS

Washington, April 17 (AP)—Attorney General Cummings announced today the government will seek an immediate Supreme Court review of the decision by the First Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston yesterday holding old age benefit provisions of the Social Security Act unconstitutional.

"The government will request that the case involving the old age benefit provisions of the Social Security Act, be set down for argument at the session of the Supreme Court beginning April 26," Cummings said. "This will make possible a determination of the matter prior to the adjournment of the court at the end of the present term."

The question of the constitutionality of unemployment provisions of the act is already before the Supreme Court, in another case.

Other government officials said they would welcome an early decision.

Boston Security Case Record Off to Capital

Attorney Edward F. McClennen, who successfully challenged the constitutionality of the Social Security Act, will await the government's next step before taking further action, he said today.

McClennen explained that if the government appeals to the Supreme Court a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, which held taxes imposed under two provisions were unconstitutional, it would check him from obtaining a permanent injunction to restrain collection of the taxes.

In any event, he said, he would be unable to obtain an injunction until the mandate of the Court of Appeals goes down to the district court. Fifteen days, he said, is allowed for that procedure.

RECORDS GO TO CAUITAL

In order that possible Supreme Court consideration of the Boston decision be not impeded by any delay of records in the cases here, the entire clerical staff of the Circuit Court of Appeals worked feverishly today transcribing all briefs and texts.

Full copies of all papers were put in the afternoon mail to Washington, addressed to the solicitor general.

The vast tax machine will proceed as usual, officials said, until the Supreme Court renders its opinion on another test case which it has already heard.

It is possible this opinion—on the question of constitutionality of unemployment insurance provisions of the act—may be handed down within the next 10 days.

The case before the high court is that of the Charles C. Steward Machine Company of Alabama, which protests the payroll tax on employers. The company contends the law illegally coerces the states to act as the federal government wills.

SET-UP CRITICIZED

Unlike the decision by the circuit court here, the Alabama company lost out in its case before the Fifth District Circuit Court of Appeals, which rendered a finding in favor of the government.

Even should the Supreme Court reverse this decision, the Social Security Act would still not be invalidated, officials claimed, as only one title of the entire 11 is involved.

By a decision of 2 to 1 the circuit court here declared the same title unconstitutional, in direct opposition to the Alabama finding. It also went a step further, criticizing the entire social security set-up and warning that unless the courts "are continually on guard to preserve the dual form of our government the states will become "mere geographical sub-divisions of our national domain."

The local circuit court also declared that Title 8 of the act was unconstitutional. This title provides old age benefit taxes on both employer and employes.

DELAYS ARE SEEN

It is doubtful if the Supreme Court will hear arguments on the validity of this title during the present session, though security act heads and George P. Davis of Waltham, stockholder in the Boston and Maine and the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, who brought the test cases, are anxious for an early showdown on the question of constitutionality.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, declared:

"The Social Security Board is hopeful that it may be possible to have this case heard by the Supreme Court at its present term."

In order to obtain a final decision before the high court adjourns in early June a new appeal on the Boston cases would have to be filed by next Saturday so that the court could announce on the following Monday whether it would review the dispute. Usually several weeks are required for this procedure.

If the Supreme Court granted an appeal on April 26, the cases would have to be argued that week or the following week, as no arguments will be heard after that time.

he might not be obliged to waste unnecessary time.

NO SPECIAL FAVORS

"This case must be handled just like any other," frowned Judge Daniel H. Gillen. "I cannot give anyone special consideration."

Rudy, a springtime picture in his natty suit of light gray and black check, bright crimson tie and black and white breast-pocket handkerchief, bowed dignified acquiescence.

He was released on his own recognizance.

Also arraigned today was Harry Paul, Vallee's Boston friend and New England representative.

Paul faced a charge of destroying property at Photographer Fitzgerald, to-wit a camera.

Complaints in the case were sworn out by Fitzgerald after an encounter in a Boston theater lobby, last week.

PHOTOGRAPHER'S CHARGE

According to Fitzgerald, his camera was knocked from his hands by Paul after he had taken a picture of Vallee and a young woman. Vallee followed Fitzgerald as the latter left the lobby and struck him from behind, according to the complaint.

After Paul's case, like Vallee's, had been continued, Paul swore out a warrant charging Fitzgerald with striking him.

Before and after his actual arraignment, Vallee took elaborate precautions to avoid being greeted in the courtroom or in adjacent corridors by feminine admirers who were on hand, as always, to get a closeup view of their idol.

COOL TOWARD HIS PUBLIC

While awaiting Judge Gillen, Vallee persuaded court officers to let him retire to an ante-room.

After the arraignment he strode swiftly from the court, brushing by spectators without giving them a glance.

The warrant against Vallee held by Boston police was served when he came into the city to appear with his band and entertainment troupe at a Washington street restaurant ballroom.

When a Boston Evening American cameraman confronted Vallee on the court house steps the crooner turned on his heel and dashed back into the building.

There he found temporary refuge in the office of Clerk Edmund Hoy, with Paul guarding the door.

Resourceful reporters, however, demanded access to the clerk's office "on public business."

When the door was opened the camera clicked, catching Vallee huddled meekly on a bench in a distinctly "off-guard" pose.

U.S. Navy Tunes Up For 'War Games'

JAMES V. DE VINE

Boston police were today awaiting fingerprints from Philadelphia to determine whether James V. De Vine, 24-year-old youth arrested for a series of holdups in that city, has a police record here.

De Vine, who allegedly confessed to robberies in New Orleans and other cities, told Philadelphia police he is the scion of a wealthy Back Bay family but refused to reveal their identity because he "doesn't want to drag them into this affair."

So far Boston police have been unable to find any connection of De Vine's here but they have not made an intensive investigation because they have yet received no request for action from Philadelphia.

De Vine was arrested in Philadelphia by officers who had trailed him for several days. He is alleged to have confessed to a string of theater holdups there.

'The Jamaicaway' New Place; Ex-Governor, Bride 'At Home'

LIVING LIFE OF PERFECT EASE

OLD FRIENDS WELCOMED BY 'JIM'

"The Jamaicaway" is a brand new place these days —which perhaps is just another way of saying that James M. Curley and his bride of four months are now really at home.

For thousands of those who have followed the political fortunes of the former governor and mayor, "The Jamaicaway" is not a thoroughfare at all—it is the green-shuttered, brick dwelling of the man who has almost continually held a post of public trust for 30 years. And James Curley, still to all his friends "Governor", is justly proud of his home. He likes it, he wants his friends to like it and there is scarcely anyone in Boston who is not a welcomed guest.

Picture Record

Last night, the former governor welcomed many of those friends to a home which has been greatly changed since the day he sailed on his honeymoon last January. The lawns are newly terraced, the furnishings have been somewhat changed and a brand new game and recreation room has been added.

In that game room are more than 200 pictures, taken with those in every walk of life, in an album which provides a picture-record of almost everything that Curley has ever done.

There are visiting celebrities, returning aviation heroes, politicians, educators, leading sports figures and many others. The long room in which they are housed is really a Cape Cod cottage, transplanted to the basement of the Curley Jamaica Plain home.

Then too, there is the added recreation room library set off by lounge chairs, a glowing fireplace and a small organ. Nearly 1000 books take up the wall space.

Real Organist

The organ is not an instrument for show for the former Governor's bride is a real organist, one who will play and sing for the Curley family and all its guests. Mrs. Curley is not the only one in the family who is an organist. In fact, she confesses that all the children love to play and to "get in a good song" she has to really pick and choose her time.

With the new Mrs. Curley, there is still another high school freshman to have long been linked with the home that James Curley built on the Jamaicaway. She is his daughter, Mary Curley Donnelly, who still is a constant and favored visitor. To Mrs. Curley, Mary is "Dot", and is consulted in domestic matters of the home she had so much to do creating before her marriage two years ago.

The home is quieter these days than it was in the hectic days and nights of last fall when the Governor was making his fight for a senate seat. Then, hundreds called daily to consult and offer advice, for James Curley's home was always his real campaign headquarters from his earliest days.

CANADA PARLEY OPENS; CIO BARRED; STRIKE STILL ON

Oshawa, Ont., April 17 (AP)—General Motors of Canada, Ltd., and representatives of the company's 3700 strikers today accepted Premier Mitchel Hepburn's invitation to a peace conference in his Toronto office this afternoon.

Hepburn's invitation followed the United Automobile workers decision to withdraw from its negotiating committee Hugh Thompson, Detroit organizer, whom Hepburn has repeatedly called a "foreign agitator."

A similar conference slated for last Saturday failed to materialize when Hepburn, outspoken opponent of John L. Lewis' labor movement, refused to let Thompson into his office.

HITCH OVER TITLES

Homer Martin, U.A.W.A. president, decided last night to send C. H. Millard, president of the union's Oshawa local, and J. L. Cohen, the union's Canadian counsel, to the premier's office.

Both Millard and Cohen are Canadians.

A spokesman said the company would be glad to meet Millard and Cohen to talk peace if they styled themselves "representatives of the Oshawa workers," and nothing else.

As long as they called themselves representatives of the United Automobile Workers International Union, the spokesman said, General Motors would not deal with them.

STRIKE CONTINUES

Union recognition has been the strike issue. The workers demanded that General Motors of Canada, Ltd., recognize the United Automobile Workers of America as their agent for collective bargaining. The company professed to be willing to deal with a local committee, regardless of union affiliation, but to be unwilling to make a contract with the International Union.

Martin's statement said: "We are accepting this invitation of the premier to meet General Motors in his office, and Mr. J. L. Cohen, counsel for the international union, will attend with Mr. Millard (Charles H. Millard, president of the Oshawa union) and the committee on behalf of the union."

He said the strike would continue, pending outcome of negotiations.

U. S. Board Finds Way to Avert Rail Strike

San Francisco, April 17 (AP)—A federal mediation board, appointed to investigate a Southern Pacific Railway labor dispute, found the way to intervention cleared today by last minute union action in postponing a strike of 8500 employes.

Two dissatisfied brotherhoods called off the proposed walkout yesterday, less than two hours before it was to become effective on lines from Portland, Ore., to El Paso, Tex., and eastward from here to Ogden, Utah.

The emergency mediation board, appointed under the Railway Labor act, called a meeting Tuesday to hear grievances presented by the Brotherhoods of Firemen and Trainmen.

19 Labor, Industry Chiefs to Join Parley

Washington, April 17 (AP)—Secretary Perkins counted 19 acceptances today from leaders of labor and industry for a conference Tuesday on problems of collective bargaining between employers and workers.

The latest to accept were Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio; C. M. Chester, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, and John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head.

Still to be heard from was President William Green of the American Federation of Labor. Associates said they did not know whether he expected to attend.

The meeting is an outgrowth of Supreme Court validation of the Wagner Act, which guarantees to workers the right of collective bargaining.

One official of the National Labor Relations Board, which administers the act, said the members "felt rather keenly" the fact that Miss Perkins had called such a conference without consulting them.

"Outlaw" Strike Forces Tire Town to Walk

Akron, O., April 17 (AP)—Some 350,000 residents of Greater Akron, the nation's rubber capital, stayed today a week-end without street car or bus service.

Union officials reported no peace negotiations in a day-old strike against the Akron Transportation Company which forced this northeastern Ohio industrial area's population to depend on private cars, taxicabs or walking.

"We're not going to attempt to operate until we find out what these fellows want," said M. F. Gill, secretary of an American Federation of Labor union which claims a majority of the drivers as members.

Gill, who termed the walkout an "outlaw strike," announced that the Amalgamated Association of Street Car, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, local's 300 members would meet tomorrow and that no attempt would be made meanwhile to resume operations.

AFL-CIO Battle for Ship Labor Rule

New York, April 17 (AP)—A union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor came to order purposely today with another affiliated with the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization and the issue was survival of one of them among wireless workers on ships at sea.

Neither the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, the older group, nor the American Radio Telegraphists' Association, chartered only two days ago by the CIO, indicated it would give ground.

As the newer union, armed with a newly-signed agreement with the International Mercantile Marine, dispatched requests to 35 other steamship companies asking for collective bargaining conferences, the A. F. of L. affiliate announced it would contest the association's drive for members.

SLAIN BANDIT'S MOTHER STRICKEN; HUNT BLONDE

long series of crimes attributed to him by police.

This blond girl, the "gun-girl," was with Dickens and at least one companion when a shot-gun blast from their stolen machine wounded a pursuing state trooper on the Concord turnpike near Belmont two nights ago, police said today.

They believe she was not far away, yesterday, when Dickens, drawing one of his own two guns, was shot to death in a Commonwealth avenue garage by Special Officer Michael J. Cullinane of Brighton station.

It was learned today by the Boston Evening American that the state police, through questioning of a paroled convict and former "pal" of Dickens, discovered that the youthful bandit had already planned a "big robbery."

SOUGHT CONVICT'S AID

This convict, who left prison about the same time Dickens was paroled from Concord Reformatory in 1932, told the state police:

"Dickens came to see me recently and asked me to go in with him on this big job. I wouldn't do it since I had a good job and was going straight."

Seeking new clues to the identity of the mysterious blonde gun-girl, police today attempted to locate a suspected Boston headquarters of Dickens and his gang.

Warrants were out for two alleged male members of the mob, Lloyd A. Friedman, 27, a former Reform Hill artist, charged with attempted murder of a police officer, and Sidney Power of Mattapan, a paroled reformatory convict.

"GOOD GIRL" DECEIVED

Both these men were reported today to have fled the city. Their descriptions were broadcast throughout New England.

A third man, giving a Cambridge address, was being questioned today. He was picked up while driving a car allegedly seen near the garage where Dickens met his death.

Meantime, first to detectives, then, in more detail to the Boston Evening American, the Merrimac girl who until recently believed her former schoolmate, Dickens, a "perfect gentleman," told how he deceived her and her parents.

She is Miss Helen Frances Head, 21, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Natt Head of Lincoln street, Merrimac.

Miss Head was questioned today by Sergeant Arthur M. Tiernan of Boston police headquarters.

He said investigators were satisfied she and her parents had been completely deceived by Dickens, in his "perfect gentleman" role.

The shooting which ended Dickens' crime career took place in a garage stall in the rear of 1319 Commonwealth avenue, Brookline.

The garage proprietor telephoned police that he believed a car placed in the stall by Dickens was stolen. His description of the machine tallied with that of the stolen sedan from which thieves had opened fire, the night before, on State Trooper Dominick Guilfreda on the Concord turnpike, wounding him in the arm.

BANDIT PULLS GUN

To the Commonwealth avenue garage, to lay a trap for the man who had left the auto, hurried Special Officers Cullinane and George D. Doherty, both in plain clothes.

A few minutes after both officers arrived, Dickens showed up. He was carrying panes of glass to replace the missing windows in the machine. This cost him his life and saved that of the policeman.

For as the officers told him who they were, Dickens dropped the plates and reached for his pistol, but too late and just too slowly for Special Officer Cullinane, who put three shots into Dickens' body. The man died a few minutes later.

In his clothing, searched at the Southern Mortuary, was found another gun and the auto parked in the garage turned out to be a rolling arsenal. Hidden in an improvised compartment were two rifles, two shotguns and two revolvers. There were also several sets of stolen number plates and a complete kit of burglar tools.

One of the shotguns had been recently fired and was believed by police to be the weapon used against State Trooper Guilfreda.

The car in the garage stall was definitely identified as that which Guilfreda was pursuing when he was wounded.

STOLEN AUTO

It was stolen in Wellesley, April 4, police said. They identified the auto in which Dickens drove to his death-rendezvous as one stolen in Reading, Thursday. It bore plates stolen in Roxbury, March 27.

Also found in the auto in the garage was an outfit of brown hair dye. This, according to police, Dickens intended to use to darken his hair and mustache, which he had previously bleached to change his appearance.

Among the many recent Greater Boston crimes listed today as the work of Dickens and his gang were the following:

Morgan Creamery and Thornlike drugstore holdups in Brighton; a $2000 payroll holdup at the Oxford Print in Commonwealth avenue, an auto larceny and safe-blowing in Reading, an attempted hardware store burglary and attempted murder of a police officer in Wellesley, and auto thefts and license plate thefts in Arlington, Amesbury, Roxbury, Wahan and other communities of the Metropolitan district.

GIRL ALLY WITH HIM

In the Brighton holdups, in the Oxford Print robbery and in the Wellesley gun duel with a police officer, Dickens was accompanied by a girl, witnesses agreed.

The same girl, blonde hair wildly flying, shrill voice urging "Let him have it," was seen with Dickens in the stolen car from which State Trooper Guilfreda was fired upon.

Efforts of police were concentrated today in a search for this gun-girl.

Investigators believe her the "evil genius" in Dickens recent crime orgy.

They hoped today to find her, or trace of her, in a Boston headquarters used by the Dickens gang.

This headquarters, police were convinced, is located somewhere in the general vicinity of the Commonwealth avenue scene of Dickens' death at the hands of the law.

They were checking apartment house after apartment house today, seeking one where a man of Dickens' description was a tenant.

Battle Red Plans, Cardinal Hayes Tells Diocese

New York, April 17 (INS)—Calling for a "widespread renewal of the Christian spirit," Cardinal Hayes today called on the Catholic church to battle Communistic subversive influences.

Bitterly attacking the Reds in a pastoral, made public today and to be read in the 371 churches of the archdiocese tomorrow, Cardinal Hayes declared:

"The world needs today," as never before, the force of example of good Christian lives. Subversive influences are busily at work in nation after nation seeking to destroy established institutions and to set up a despotic state.

"They exploit the privations and misery of the poor and lure men to destruction by mirages of promised wealth. They preach hatred and class war as the motive power of human progress."

Such a movement can lead only to the abandonment of liberty, religion and the enslavement of men under economic despotism, the Cardinal declared.

Van Devanter, 78, Works on Birthday

Washington, April 17 (AP)—Justice Willis Van Devanter, who has sat on the Supreme Court longer than any of his colleagues, observed his 78th birthday today by studying some of the legal problems awaiting solution by the tribunal.

"It is just the same as any other day," said an associate.

Justice Van Devanter, appointed by President Taft in 1910, is exceeded in age only by 80-year-old Justice Brandeis. He likes such outdoor activity as duck hunting and roaming about his newly acquired Maryland farm.

He attracted considerable attention a few months ago by failing to buy a $1 hunting license when he went in pursuit of ducks in nearby Virginia. He pleaded ignorance of the law when accosted by a game warden and promptly obtained the required stamp.

Police Seek Mother Missing Four Days

Two Cambridge Men Held After Battle

After a wild free-for-all in an alley off Prospect street, Cambridge, police today arrested two men and charged them with attempted breaking and entering in the night time.

One of the men made a dash for freedom in the corridors of Cambridge City Hospital, where he and his companion had been removed for treatment of injuries suffered in the fight with police.

The two were booked as James R. Post, 21, of Bigelow street, and James Lyons, 19, of Douglas street, both Cambridge.

On complaint of a chef, Alexander Balchronis, of Washington street, Roxbury, that two men were acting suspiciously near the Prospect street restaurant where he is employed, Patrolmen William Lamb and George Dalton and Sergt. Charles E. Mallahan sped to the scene.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

17-Year-Old Girl Finds 'Real Love'—But the Man Is Married

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A great deal of the trouble in the world is of one's own making. We walk into it with our eyes open, and though the dangee signals fly, we keep wo[r]king in our own stubborn way.

Alice, who writes me today, is a good example.

"I'm a girl of 17," she says, "and I am desperately, hopelessly in love with a man almost twice my age. Mine is the kind of love that nothing could destroy—not even the fact that he is married and has two children.

"We have met secretly for more than two years. Ever since the day we first saw each other and formed an immediate and mutual affection.

"Now we are going places in the open, regardless of gossip, which we realize must some day reach his wife's ears.

"Of course, my parents disapprove of my going with him and try to persuade me to go with boys my own age and forget my true love. As if it would ever be possible for me to bury the memory of the good times we've had together!

"Miss Fairfax, can't you see what there is only one chance for real love in this world and that some girls, those like myself, must take the chance, even though marriage is out of the question?"

A RISKY VENTURE

Alice is confused; there's no doubt about that. She knows she is doing wrong, but because she finds a satisfaction in robbing a woman of her husband, she writes rather convincing discourses on "real love."

BUT WHATEVER HER CONFUSION IS JUST NOW, IT IS NOTHING TO WHAT HER CONFUSION WILL BE FIVE OR SIX YEARS HENCE.

Loving married men is a mighty dangerous experiment for all single girls, especially those only 17. Very seldom do the men divorce their wives and marry them. Consequently the only rewards for such loving women are smashed reputations and broken careers.

A bad start is a serious thing in any venture, never more so than in matrimony, most serious of ventures.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My husband and I have a very nice home which I support. We've been married four years, and I have worked continuously. He lost his position after we had been married six months, and has had only occasional substitute work, which has not averaged $5 a week.

This, he claims, he needs for carfare, incidental expenses and clothes. Several jobs have been open to him. He has declined them because they are not what he wants.

I've about decided to leave him, as I think it might make a man of him if he were thrown on his own resources, and he would show more eagerness in getting a job.

I really love him and am quitting him as an experiment, to see if he'll take a brace and really look for satisfactory employment. WORKING WIFE.

DEAR READER:

A hustling wife is often a very [illegible] influence on a lazy man, but there is a good deal more at stake in this case than the mere question of whether or not he will get a job. Many a man has been driven to drink by a nagging wife, and many a wife has driven her husband to the arms of another woman by her jealousy or nagging.

Your idea of letting him sink or swim is a good one, but it has often been tried and found wanting.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

[illegible] or with me every day. He is [illegible] open but he can never see a problem without flaring up and forgets himself. I've tried to get [illegible] I have to say "good-night."

We take a nice summer home on the beach, and we spend [illegible] and then for an evening [illegible] swim, rest and dress for [illegible] Sunday. On the contrary, [illegible] for an evening [illegible] And always [illegible] pick of the litter, and sometimes they [illegible] rather than keep dates to make or [illegible] us happy.

Mamma doesn't [illegible] She just smacks and says, "You know your father." Oh, yeah, we recognize [illegible] man only when he [illegible] No harm in either, but [illegible].

INDIGNANT.

DEAR KRISTY:

If a girl has such a well-defined case of adult juvenility [illegible] and doesn't mean anything by it, there isn't very much you can do. You might [illegible] them [illegible] you expect [illegible] get [illegible] and find out what sweets he can [illegible] the way of [illegible]. Penalty DOUBLE As Psychic BID

There is such a thing as paying too much attention and respect to the opponents.

After all, they are your enemies and will do their best to deceive you.

Beware of being an easy mark.

North-South vulnerable.

West, dealer.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♢	Pass	1 ♡
Double	2 ♣	Pass	3 ♢
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	3 N T
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding given above is that which actually occurred in duplicate duplicate game. At all of the other tables the North and South players arrived at a grand slam contract without much trouble. But, at the tables where the reported bidding took place, West succeeded in frightening North by his psychic double.

The use of the penalty double as a psychic bid is rare and, perhaps for that reason, very effective. With his worthless hand West felt sure that South's forcing takeout of two diamonds would lead his opponents to a makable slam. His penalty double was the only thing that he could think of to intimidate the opponents.

He felt very sure that North and South could not play less a diamond contract and hoped that the double would cause North to doubt the solidity of South's suit.

The psychic bid the desired effect. In spite of all poor South could do to entice his partner into a grand slam, North still feared the loss of a diamond trick.

When the opening lead was made, declarer spread his hand and mournfully remarked that he could make sixteen tricks. Perhaps the bottom score will teach North to listen to his partner's bids in the future as well as to those of the opponents.

How to Curb High Blood Pressure

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

EVERYONE is familiar with high blood pressure but few make any efforts to correct or relieve this condition.

Physicians everywhere now realize its seriousness and are making every effort to overcome a condition which may become very serious.

When a doctor talks about high blood pressure, he calls it "essential hypertension." Unfortunately, there are many theories as to the cause of this condition, but no single one has been confirmed.

For years high blood pressure was believed to be the result of kidney disease, faulty diet, excessive use of foods rich in protein, obesity, diabetes and hardening of the blood vessels. Within recent years a new theory has been advanced which undoubtedly will play an important part in solving this problem.

GLANDS PLAY PART

I refer to the possible relationship between the "endocrine glands" and blood pressure. There is no doubt that many cases of high blood pressure occur because of some disturbance in these, the ductless glands, or glands of internal secretion.

In fact, it is believed by some authorities that the endocrine glands play an important part in the prevention as well as the cure of many of the common disorders of mankind.

Until these factors are better understood, it is well for all sufferers to resort to accepted methods of treatment. They should follow the precautions commonly advised for the prevention of hypertension and its complications.

This is best accomplished by proper diet, adequate hours of rest and relaxation and the avoidance of all known factors that help to increase blood pressure.

The constant rush and ever-lasting work routine, with little attention to relaxation and health, are shortcuts to high blood pressure and disease.

New Ways of Serving Out-of-Season Vegetables

By MARTHA LEE

WHY not join the "Add Another Flavor to Your Vegetables" Campaign? We take great pleasure in helping foster such a noble cause.

None of us mean to be careless about it, but we simply form a habit of preparing a vegetable in one certain way and soon forget that there are other more attractive ways. Some other ways take no more time.

But they add variety to the meal and make the same vegetable a thing to be looked for rather than to be used up in left-over dishes.

Speaking of left-over dishes—need there be any? The answer is decidedly "no." When dressed in the latest fashion they will be even more interesting than when first served.

What flavor shall we add? Well, try bacon or cheese as your meat. Such as salt pork is a good member of the onion family, cheese, catsup, parsley or salads. Or we can try some more combination of vegetables or cabbage in different shapes for needed variety.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 270

AS Mary saw Roderick racing up to the door, she held out to me the cup from which she had been feeding Faith her morning milk.

"I'll see to the baby, Mary," she said. "But don't excite yourself, darling. Ten to one, Roderick's news is nothing startling.

"If I had made the wager, I should have won hands down," Mary said tensely. "Do you suppose Noel has had another chill?"

I took her by the shoulders, gripped them tightly and looked steadily into her troubled eyes.

"Shall we keep on watching and come and tell you what we see?"

"No, not any more," I told him. "You and Junior may have a good romp with the dog until we call you for breakfast. You have kept watch very nicely. Thank you so much."

There was no one in sight when I reached the "hospital cabin," and I knocked ever so lightly upon the kitchen door, hoping that I was breaking no rule of sickroom decorum.

Neil Gibbs opened the door almost immediately.

"I am so sorry I came over," I began, but she turned on me in amazement.

"Why?" she demanded. "You made no noise that would disturb a baby. And, of course, I know why you're here. That young man's a wild! Didn't you much rest, is she" Poor child! You can't blame her."

"Of course, she's terribly anxious," I said apologetically.

"I should say the danger of pneumonia is quite definitely over. "ut, of course, you must not quote me officially. As soon as Dr. Rickey comes, we shall obtain a verdict, and then we shall send for Mrs. Veritges immediately, if the doctor consents, and I am sure he will."

Elsie Perkins, Polly Paine Join Ranks of Brides

By BETTY ALDEN

WEEK-ENDS from now until the end of June will be one long procession of ushers and bridesmaids floating with the traditional languor up and down the middle aisles of churches and chapels in a billowy cloud of satin, tulle and orange blossoms and lilies . . . In the vanguard of this grand march which really started last week are Elsie Hooper Perkins and William Sterling Youngman, who were married in Cambridge this afternoon at a very pretty wedding, which was different from most because there was not a speck of white on the bridal costume and not a veil was visible . . . The lack of these customary properties was not accidental, but by intent, as Miss Elsie Perkins calls "one of my whims" . . . The ceremony was performed in front of the large open fireplace in the Owls' Nest, the Longfellow home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forbes Perkins . . . The fireplace was banked with greens, as was the formal yet verdant background for the costumes of the bride and her attendants, as the latter formed a verdant background for the costumes of the bride and her attendants, as the latter formed a verdant background for the costumes of the bride and her attendants, as the latter formed a

PLAN For Pier First NEED

[illegible] vice-chairman of the Port Authority [illegible] the proposed need [illegible] points out the benefits to be derived from a practical plan to supersede any construction.

Some years ago Edwin J. Gallagher, authoritative book [illegible] of Boston, in a volume recorded as depicting conditions [illegible] port, physical and [illegible] perhaps more adequately than any other which has appeared before or since. The book contains this statement: "Most Port development in the United States is the result of instinct and enthusiasm rather than [illegible] information which should be the basis of public as well as private expenditure and action."

In considering the statement in the light of the present talk about the necessity for a new State pier [illegible] pause, and recalls that [illegible] is often vital, careful thought [illegible] vitally as vital. A series of conferences and conversations in the last few weeks has already demonstrated that the question at the moment is not only [illegible] there should not be another State pier, but also where a new pier or piers should be located to meet all city traffic requirement—passenger and freight. Should the pier be a strictly freight structure, or should it be a combination passenger and freight facility, or should it be a passenger pier without reference to cargo? To which trade, coastwise or offshore, or both, should better facilities be offered?

Coupled with the problem is also the matter of repairs to and renovation of existing piers, in effect, reconstruction rather than a new construction or development, with a very pertinent query as to whether or not a program of this sort might satisfy requirements and at the same time entail less expense.

PLANS COME FIRST

The need of a comprehensive plan for future piers and terminals of the port is well recognized. Work on it should have begun long ago, so that it might have been a factor in the present situation. Nevertheless such a plan should be had before plunging into heavy expenditures for pier construction. It is better to put in a year's work on it, beginning immediately, under the direction of the State Department of Public Works with whom already rests authorization for its being done, than to make the grave error of a wrong move based on the flurry of a few months congestion, to which congestion causes other than lack of pier space were important contributing factors.

HANEY'S QUESTION BOX

U. S. Debt Slated TO REACH 40 BILLION By June 30, 1937

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, April 17—The following questions have come in from Newport, R. I., and New York City.

* * *

(1)—Was there an income tax in 1917?

Ans.—Yes. Our federal government levied an income tax during the Civil War, repealing it in 1872. In the great depression of 1893 it again enacted an income tax, but the Supreme Court held it unconstitutional in 1895. Finally, the Constitution was amended in 1913 and a new income tax was at once enacted.

* * *

(2)—What was the total debt before the World War? After the war to what peak did it rise? What is it now?

Ans.—The gross federal debt was running around $1,200,000,000 in the years prior to 1917. It attained a post-war maximum in 1919 when it was $25,482,000,000. Then it fell to $16,931,000,000 in 1929.

Now it is well over $34,000,000,000 and will rise to about $35,027,000,000 by June 30 this year.

Moreover, there are over four billions of indirect obligations guaranteed by the federal government which bring its real debt up to over 40 billion dollars.

* * *

(3)—What is the limit to the government debt? If it is reached, what then?

Ans.—I doubt that anyone can name the exact limit. Mr. Roosevelt once stated that some "banker," whom he would not name, had advised him that a federal debt of 55 billion dollars would not be too heavy. This, however, means nothing.

The practical limit is the ability of banks and insurance companies to do what is called "investing" in government bonds. This, in turn, depends upon the government's ability either to stop spending or to raise taxes so as to balance the budget.

In my opinion the political limit of taxation has been very nearly reached. It therefore seems to me that any large real increase in the public debt now depends upon reduced government spending.

When I say "real increase in debt" I mean an increase in the purchasing power value of the total of government bonds and notes outstanding. A government can always print more paper. But when the value of the paper falls faster than its quantity the total real debt is actually decreasing. It is headed for repudiation.

* * *

(4)—Is there not enough wealth in this great country of ours to take care of everyone who wants to work and give them security? Isn't the system of technocracy the answer?

Ans.—I take it that you mean real wealth as goods and services. Money is no good except as it buys goods and services.

Probably there is enough real wealth at present to provide for everyone according to a very moderate standard of living, though some things most people would wish for would not go around.

The two big questions are: (1) How would we maintain the supply? (2) How would we keep up with expanding wants?

It is necessary to stimulate people to work and save and to reward them for their sacrifices. In order to do this most people have to be paid according to the value of what they produce.

This, in turn, requires paying people differently, because they differ widely in productivity.

PORT Needs New PIER

"Build another Commonwealth Pier immediately; one that is fully equal to the one in South Boston, demanded Joseph A. Maynard, Collector of Customs at Boston, in addressing the Central Square Business Men's Association at their recent dinner in Cambridge.

"General Richard K. Hale, Associate Commissioner of the Public Works Department, said that it took two to three years to build Commonwealth Pier. If as long a time is taken for a new pier, it will be 1939 or 1940 before it is ready.

"We need a new pier now and not only that but we need modernization of the old piers. There should be no lagging. Immediate action is essential. The people of Massachusetts should demand action through their representation in the State Legislature, who should see to it that the Commonwealth does its full share for Boston—the gateway of New England for the entry of raw materials for New England mills and factories and for export of the finished products.

WHARVES NOT MODERN

"We of the Customs know of the congestion on the piers, and why. The wharves are not modern. Our inspectors have made an exhaustive survey of conditions on the piers revealing a deplorable condition for a port such as Boston, second in the country in importance.

"Owners of private wharves have done little or nothing to improve their wharves and bring them up to date. Some of them are typical to the type of transportation in the horse and buggy days. Many lack freight elevators, some are too short to accomodate the large vessels coming to Boston today. Many wharves in Charlestown are of no great value in handling the great influx of imports. Some were built as much as half a century ago.

"Piers of the Boston & Albany Railroad in South Boston are in fair condition. Commonwealth Pier No. 1 in East Boston is handicapped by being only 420 feet long and 150 feet wide. It has a single track railroad connection.

PIER INADEQUATE

"On March 12, 1937, the steamer Chemnitz arrived and was moored at Commonwealth Pier No. 1, where 6800 bales of wool and about 2000 bags of coffee were landed. The railroad pit had to be used in order that the ship could be discharged. The large bales of wool had to be put in the pit hampering the delivery until it was raised to the pier. Trucks were delayed by inability to move the length of the pier, being forced to take only wool from the head of the pier.

MASSACHUSETTS INDUSTRIES BUILD MASSACHUSETTS PROSPERITY!
Wages paid in Massachusetts factories are but little below compared to this time in 1929. The buying power of these wages is 15 per cent greater than in 1929. Massachusetts prosperity is chiefly dependent on the success of its industries. Let's all go forward with confidence in Massachusetts industries.

COMMODITIES

Prices in LARGE Decline

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The world-wide break in commodity prices momopolized first place in the financial news columns this week and sent many a shiver down the composite spine of speculators.

All the principal markets of the world were affected at some time or other during the period. Declines in such staples as wheat, corn, rubber, sugar and copper ranged from 5 to nearly 20 per cent.

In the aggregate commodity prices tumbled to the lowest since the high of late March and early April. The Dow-Jones index of important staples has slipped from about 75.35 between March 31 and Friday's close. Locating the exact cause of this down trend is an arbitrary business. Some may attribute it to commercial reports made by leading U. S. officials that there will be half in the crop and the organization of the Soviet dates from the beginning of the current fortnight. Others say that the London Exchange which was accompanied by definite reports that important interests in England were anxious to liquidate speculation.

One of the most obvious manifestations of late has been the trend of late has been the downward pressure of stocks to announcements of new issues. The moment an increase in capital is announced proceed grows start to fade. And it is not the news of new stock sales that sends prices down. In the case of Simmons announcement of a convertible bond issue proved depressing. As a result investors who do not wish to take up new stock or subscribe to new bond issue are disposing of their rights immediately in the "when issued" markets. At the same time shorts have put in an appearance and are said to have added to their quick profits.

Notebook: Reports are around the financial district that if effect some special liquidation in Westinghouse is ended. . . . And with the rights of Simmons disappearing in the next position years, it is expected that the stock should be due for a substantial rise after a month's long downtrend . . . Oil equipment stocks are due to feature in further weakness in certain investment circles. The thought being that this year will witness some road repairing on a big gain in orders . . . Utilities are starting to reverse themselves, and many observers feel and hopes they will be successful.

The stock market is reflected by a mirror of ideas towards the close of the week. On one day there were evidences of accumulation by investment interests. On the other hand there was evidence of a because of unrest and fears inspired by the decline in commodities could be found. The traders who bought stocks this week should place holdings with stocks ahead of the previous low levels. Some of the talks and industrials both are through these it will look as though still lower prices must be reached before a turn is possible.

Chamber Opposes Waterway Project

The Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce is opposed to the St. Lawrence-Champlain-Hudson Waterway project for many reasons, chief of which are:

That is it admittedly supplementary to, and competitive with, the carrying out of the St. Lawrence project. The the enormous cost involved from one hundred to two hundred millions would be a positive tremendous taxes upon the country.

That it would isolate Boston and practically all other New England ports and would prevent their participation in commerce to and from interior United States and Canada via Buffalo.

That it would be disastrous to New England's railroads.

STOCK Prices Are STEADY

METAL SHARES SLIDE OFF

New York, April 17 (INS)—A better tone in many of the world's commodity markets today indicated the stock market today. Leaders for the most part ran up to other side of the previous close.

Commss, trections, mail orders and most rails were declined to slightly over twelve. Steels lost some ground. Motors were mixed while building shares, amusements and packing issues were generally behind the signs.

Softness in metal shares still reflected the sharp declines in the domestic market. Losses of a point or more by Kennecott, Anaconda, American Smelting and Phelps Dodge were not lost sight of in the rally that carried the general list off from the lowest point in the day's trading.

Motors Up

Motor shares were the leader spurted about a point at the close with the exception of Studebaker. General Motors, Chrysler and International Harvester were among the issues in this group which showed substantial gains. Specialties, particularly those in the amusement, and certain of the specialty issues were also in demand. Eastman Kodak preferred in the specialty group on speculations of the improved earnings. The drug group gained more than a point. Corn Products moved ahead 4 points, recovering most of the loss registered in the previous session. Utilities were mixed, and generally narrow. Rails were quiet and heavy.

Building Outlook

Wood Products Corp. reports that orders for its shares for the week ending April 10 were the largest in any week since the corporation was organized. Sales for the week ending April 10 were 65 per cent greater than the corresponding week in March were 65 per cent greater than the corresponding week of last year.

The building industry is looking forward to a big spring season. Whether the prices will be maintained or not is judging stocks now, the recent upward trend would indicate that the worst is over and that a substantial gain is in store.

Although sales are about 10 times as great as they were a year ago, the actual gross earnings of foreign exchange dealers have increased only about a cent at a time, or a fraction of a cent.

MULLINS Earnings Up

Mullins Manufacturing Corp. Sa-lem, Ohio, reports net profit for March quarter of $145,567, equal after dividend requirements on preferred to $2.56 per share on the common.

For the nine months ended March 31 net profit was $1,000,000, equal after dividend requirements on preferred to $17.60 per share on the common.

Company controls new method of $1,000,000 annually and expects to 39 cents a share of class A common on same basis.

Comments of Brokers

All of the developments of the past week combine to justify the belief that institutional portfolio diversification would be completed and to take advantage of the recovery in high grade bonds to continue to ...

Future conditions bear out optimistic expectations, purchases of ... stocks should turn out to be ...—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

For near term trading purposes we would on the whole prefer to lean to the constructive side ...—J. F. Bache & Co.

Continued quiet narrow markets are in prospect so that only a trading ... possible.—J. F. Mahey, Shields & Co.

For the present, we can only conclude that the market, in ending to start a sustained forward movement. It is still in process of forming a broad base. We believe it will succeed in doing so.—Mosley, Hornblower & Weeks.

ATTY. ARNOLD DIES IN FALL AT HOSPITAL

The death plunge of Edmund Kent Arnold, 64, prominent Boston attorney and member of a well-known legal firm, from the eighth floor of Phillips House, Massachusetts Hospital, was revealed today.

Arnold was admitted to the hospital a few days ago suffering from cystitis and depression. He had been ill for some time.

Mystery shrouded the details of his fall from the top floor of the institution but it was learned his body was discovered on the paved terrace on the street level in the rear of the building.

INSTANT DEATH

Associate Medical Examiner Cornelius O'Leary, who was given custody of the body, said death was instantaneous. Arnold had suffered a fractured skull and several broken ribs.

O'Leary said Arnold had either "fallen or jumped" from the hospital window but declined to discuss details of the case until later today. The body was taken to the Northern mortuary.

Notified by a newspaperman of Arnold's plunge, Lieutenant Thomas McMurrray of the North End Station sent Sergeant James Lewis to investigate but hospital authorities refused to admit him or give him information regarding the death.

The hospital is a private institution, it was explained, and authorities saw no cause for police investigation.

Baffled by the refusal of the hospital to discuss the case, Lieutenant McMurray called Sergeant Joseph Fallon, head of the headquarters homicide squad, and Thomas McCuska, police stenographer, and asked them to investigate.

Fallon and McCuska went to the hospital but were also refused information.

HARVARD GRAD

Arnold was a member of the firm of Peabody, Arnold, Batchelder and Luther, with offices at 15 State street. He joined the firm upon his graduation from Harvard Law school in 1898 and has been with them ever since.

He was widely known as a corporation and probate lawyer in legal circles. He was the father of two daughters, one of whom, Miss Rosamond Arnold, lives at the Commonwealth avenue address. The other daughter is married.

His wife was the former L. Pearl Butler.

Waterfront Blaze Visible for Miles

Quick work by firemen halted a threatening two-alarm blaze on the Boston waterfront today.

Flames which broke out on the fifth floor of a building in Atlantic avenue, near Northern avenue, alarmed the district and were visible for miles across the harbor.

A heavy concentration of fire apparatus kept the blaze from spreading to other floors of the building, which is occupied by the Boston Chromium and Commercial Plate company.

Damage was estimated at $3500.

Boy, Girl Unhurt In 65-Foot Fall

Bangor, Me., April 17—Charles A. Sheehan, 17, and Miss Joan Harbach, 16, Bangor high school students, were shaken up early today, when their auto left the road on Kenduskeag avenue, near Morse's Mill, ripped up 30 feet of wooden guard railing and dropped 65 feet down an embankment into a pond.

The car turned over five times on the steep embankment. The two students were taken from the wreckage uninjured.

$40,000 Barn Burns; Firebug Blamed

Hamilton, April 17—A firebug, believed to have set a series of recent North Shore blazes, was credited with his 18th "torch" crime today, as flames destroyed a $40,000 barn on the George Harrigan farm here.

Fire departments of Hamilton, Wenham and Ipswich vainly fought the blaze, hose lines tieing up traffic from Ipswich to Boston for more than an hour. Two automobiles, 25 tons of hay and 1500 bushels of carrots were destroyed with the barn.

Geishas Organize Own Company

Osaka, Japan, April 17 (AP)—Osaka Geisha Girls, Inc., including many entertainers who recently staged a Buddhist Temple sit-down strike, in protest of stockholders' meeting today in solemn parliamentary manner.

All official positions of the newly-formed joint stock company were filled by geishas who excluded public subscriptions.

Missing Aviatrix Found on Island

Singapore, April 17 (INS)—Mrs. Harry Bonney, Australia aviatrix reported missing on an attempted solo flight from Australia to Cape Town, South Africa, was found today at Muntok, Banka Island.

She left Australia several days ago from Darwin for Africa—a flight never before attempted, and was reported missing after leaving Palembang.

Fair Collegians Ride With Spring

Girls at Lasell College heard the siren call of the great outdoors and decided something ought to be done about the matter. So they formed a riding club. Not only that, but they went forth and saddled their own mounts and, leaping more or less nimbly into the saddles today, cantered along the alluring Weston lanes. So we have here a group of horseback enthusiasts who heeded the call of "Boots and Saddles."

TIGHTEN LAWS FOR DOPE WAR

New legislation to make easier the war on dope traffic in Massachusetts will be sought by Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, it was revealed today after he had conferred with Treasury Department officials in Washington.

One most important measure Dever will seek to have enacted is to make possession of narcotics a felony, punishable by prison sentence, instead of an ordinary misdemeanor as it now is considered.

He will also ask for a law permitting state and local police to raid suspected narcotic dens without the routine of obtaining search warrants.

Girls' Home Probe Opened by Solons

Putnam, Ct., April 17 (AP)—A nine-man legislative board of inquiry today prepared to delve into charges of flogging, skimpy diets, privation and alleged mistreatment of inmates of the Windham County Home for Children.

Spurred by Representative Carl M. Sharple's demand "to get at the bottom of this pot and see that it is scoured clean," the board planned to question child inmates of the home and other witnesses concerning conditions at the institution.

Three other groups — the state police, the Connecticut Humane Society and the Windham county commissioners—already have started ferreting out details of alleged ill-treatment in the rambling structure, which houses 105 child wards.

The investigations were touched off by the complaints of two girl inmates who told police they fled the home to avoid the advances of 65-year-old Philip Provandie, superintendent of the home.

Provandie pleaded innocent to the attack charges in town court and was released on $1,000 bail. Following arraignment, Provandis, through his attorney Harry Back of Danielson, issued a blanket denial of the charges.

'Scientific' Twins Sing on Reaching 5

New York, April 17 (AP)—Jimmy and Johnny Woods, New York's "scientific" twins, celebrated the eve of their fifth birthday today by singing lustily, "Ding, Dong, the Fire Bells Ring"—and Jimmy seemed to be the better singer, if that proved anything.

Jimmy is the "unconditioned" twin, who "just grew, like Topsy," while Johnny had scientific baby-training for two years in a clinic.

Child psychologists still are studying the twins' personalities—a puzzling problem. Sometimes Johnny, who had the advantages, seems the smarter, but not always.

The experiment with the twins was conducted by the Normal Child Development Clinic of Neurological Institute of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

Stanton, Newton Officer, Is Dead

Stricken with a ruptured appendix last Sunday, Inspector Martin F. Stanton, 48, of Newton police died early today in Bay State Hospital.

Inspector Stanton joined the Newton department November 24, 1919. He was a member of the Massachusetts Police Relief Association.

Japanese Radio Plea to Helen Keller Thief

Tokyo, April 17 (AP)—Police decided today to make a radio appeal to the conscience of a pickpocket who stole an address book and more than 20 yen ($57.18) from Helen Keller, the blind educator, at Yokohama before she came here Thursday.

Miss Keller asked authorities to redouble their efforts to find the book because it contains the names of many American and foreign friends. Officials planned to ask the thief to return at least the address book.

The newspaper Asahi, commenting on the theft, said:

"In Japan we have a phrase, 'chivalrous robber,' but the offense against the holy American woman who brought light and hope to the world's millions of deaf, dumb and blind is the crime of an unchivalrous robber, amounting to a national shame. "We suspect the crime was committed by a delinquent boy incapable of distinguishing the miracle woman from others."

Meanwhile, Tokyo society fluttered with criticism by imperial household officials that some foreigners, including Miss Keller, had not conformed strictly to court rules on dress at yesterday's Cherry Blossom Festival. Certain of the men failed to remove their overcoats before entering the presence of Emperor Hirohito, while Miss Keller and other foreign women did not wear the Japanese version of orthodox morning attire.

Cottage Burns

Meredith, N. H., April 17 (AP)—A summer cottage owned by Gerald D'Amore of Arlington, Mass., was destroyed by fire here today. Loss was estimated at $7000.

WINNER OF DOG KNOWN MONDAY

Who is going to be the lucky boy or girl to win the cute wire-haired terrier in the recent contest sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Loew's State and Orpheum theaters? The winner will be announced Monday in the Boston Evening American.

Several thousand letters were received from boys and girls, readers of the Boston American, on the subject: "Why Everyone Should Always Be Kind to Dumb Animals," and the judges are reading each letter in order to select the best entry for the major award, a pedigreed and beautifully spotted three-months-old terrier.

There will be 34 other winners of cash and guest theater tickets, and these names will be published Monday.

State Officials at Trooper's Bridal

Representatives of city and state, amid scores of friends and relatives, today thronged Immaculate Conception Church, Everett, at the wedding of State Trooper James Francis Daily and Miss Mary Josephine Brady.

The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Joseph McCall. Miss Brady was given away by her father, James B. Brady, a resident of Everett for many years.

The bride wore a gown of white lace, tulle veil, with white orange blossoms. Miss Agnes Brady, a sister, was bridesmaid and wore a chiffon model, Dubonnet hat and shoes. The best man was Harold P. Oliver of Medway, the groom's brother-in-law. Daniel Shea was the organist.

A wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home, 18 Andrew street.

Corporal Edward L. McGinley of State Police Barracks at West Bridgewater and Arthur J. McCarron of Dorchester were the ushers.

After a stor trip to New York and Washington the couple will reside at 49 Williams street, East Braintree.

Officer Daily is attached to the Wareham Barracks.

Nazi Organizer's Death Stirs Berlin

Berlin, April 17 (AP)—The killing of a Nazi organizer in Argentina aroused German press and officialdom today to a burst of excitement such as followed the killing of Count Arco Whilhelm Gustloff in Switzerland last year.

Rudolf Hess, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's deputy for party affairs, immediately cabled the Argentine section of the party deep sympathy for the "dastardly murder" of Josef Riedle, 37, leader of the Villa Ballester group of the Argentine section of Nazi foreign organization.

Nazis Doom Three To Die for Killing

Berlin, April 17 (INS)—Reaching back into the past, the Nazi government's people's tribunal set a precedent today by dealing out three retroactive death sentences to Communists involved in the murder of a storm trooper in 1932.

Those sentenced to death are Erich Kreuger, 26; Paul Groca, 36, and Walter Garbang, 25. A fourth defendant, Erwin Leibich, a minor, was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

BEES, RED SOX OPEN CITY SERIES

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

JOE CASHMAN is back from the South, and, of course, is talking baseball. I believe Joe likes baseball as well as any man who ever lived, and he writes about it exceptionally well.

Mr. Boston

Cashman was telling of the wonders of Florida when I asked him to give me the low down on Vincent DiMaggio of the Bees.

"Vincent still has me guessing," confessed Joe rather frankly. "He is probably one of the greatest outfielders in baseball, but he is still a question mark as far as hitting is concerned.

"He has been running up the backs of Gene Moore and Wally Berger. He roams all over the outfield.

"Moore and Berger now yell 'I got it' when they intend to take a fly ball. Otherwise they know DiMaggio would try to get it. You never saw anything like him when it comes to covering territory."

I asked Cashman to tell me of DiMaggio's batting weakness.

"... is the quick reply. "He also swings too ... he does so by a greater margin than ... at the plate.

... brother, Joe, is an inside ball ... ball is Vincent's strength. If only he ... hits like his brother Joe, he would be a ...

... He has more life and animation than ... be a bit too much imagination. If he gets a hit all right. If not, ...

"... is no different to Joe than a clash ...

VINCENT FAST ON BASES

VINCENT IS exceptionally fast on the bases, according to Cashman.

He will steal many bases if he remains with the Bees," said ... "He ... power, a valuable man for the club if he ... He is a ... hitter, and most of his ... three cases. The Bees need just this type ...

... Bees turned to return DiMaggio to ...

... rumor recently that the Bees were going to ... Joe ... gave $10,000 ... Tommy Thompson and Lefty Chapman, San Diego.

... was willing to allow San Diego to ... back ... San Diego asked to ... players but only wished to return ...

... a delicate problem for everybody but ...

TURNER MAY PITCH MONDAY

CASHMAN TOLD me I would like Jim Turner, who came up from Indianapolis, and Lew Fette, who joined the Bees from St. Paul.

"Turner and Fette have shown fine pitching form in the South," said Cashman. "Baseball men who have seen these 30-year-old pitchers in action cannot understand how they remained in the minors as long as they did.

"Bill McKechnie may name me may pitch Turner in the afternoon game on the holiday.

"Fabian Gaffke, outfielder from Minneapolis, has proved an agreeable surprise this year. He came to the Red Sox highly recommended last Fall, but didn't come up to expectations.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1937 11

BABICH, WILSON RIVAL HURLERS AT HIVE

FOXX OUT OF OPENER; MAY PLAY THURSDAY

Sinus Holds Slugger in Hospital

Philadelphia, April 17—Jimmy Foxx, under observation in a local hospital for sinus trouble, will be back in the Red Sox lineup no later than next Thursday.

This was the hope expressed by Dr. Herbert Goddard, who is attending the hard hitting veteran first baseman of the Boston Red Sox, here.

Dr. Goddard said he didn't believe an operation would be necessary but felt that Foxx, who had been running a temperature all day, would positively be out of the opening game next Tuesday.

Foxx was still hopeful today that he would be well enough to get into a uniform for the opening game with the Athletics here.

Rubbicco, Sanborn Bowl as Awards Are Made

In a "Payoff" day for some 400 winners of the recent Boston Evening American Sunday Advertiser candlepin bowling championships Distribution of prizes starts at 5 o'clock.

Huntington Club is the scene of the presentations, where the many hundreds of trophies, merchandise and medal awards will go to as many deserving men, women and high school youngsters.

Jack Conway, sports editor of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser will represent the host papers, and add his personal regards to all who in any way contributed to the greatest candlepin success in history.

Jack Stafford, manager of Huntington Club, will be major-domo today, and in his capacity as tourney manager will present the many awards.

Chief feature will be the 10-string exhibition match between Joe Rubbicco of Roslindale and Tracey N. Sanborn, 1936 and 1937 singles champions, respectively, a match which should be one of the highlights of New England bowling.

Rubbicco created a new world tourney record for sanctioned title events with his high three strings of 504 a year ago.

Sanborn, Western Insurance office manager, this year bested Rubbicco's mark with a brilliant record of 491, one of the outstanding achievements of all time.

Huskies to Make New York Trip

Thirteen members of Northeastern's baseball team will leave Boston tomorrow for a tour of New York. The Huskies meet Panzer College at East Orange, N. J., on Monday and Long Island U. at Brooklyn Tuesday.

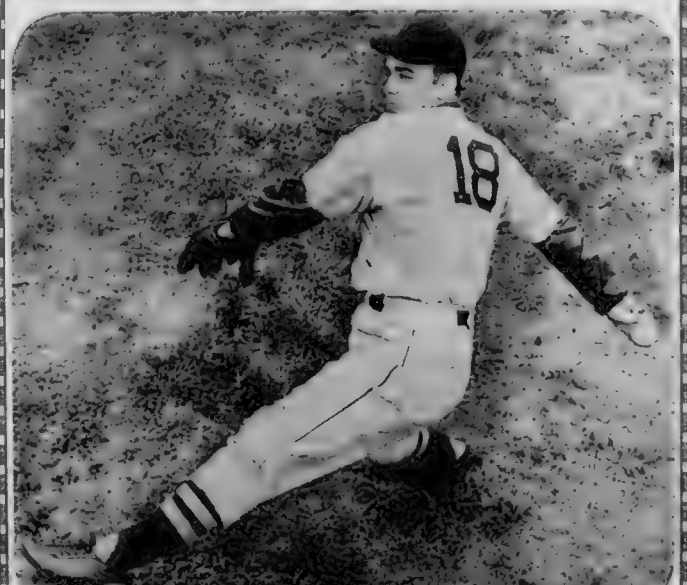
Coach Al McCoy has nominated three pitchers, five infielders, and two outfielders to make the trip. One of the pitchers, Gus Rock, will also be used in the outfield.

Injuries Mar Openings

Jimmy Foxx and Mel Almada of the Red Sox are not the only prominent major league players who will miss the season's opening games Monday and Tuesday.

Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees will be out for two weeks, recovering from a tonsilectomy; Tex Carleton, Cubs' mound ace, will be laid for a month at least, probably for the season, with a chipped right elbow bone; Pitcher Tommy Bridges of the Detroit Tigers has been ailing for weeks, and Stuart Martin, Cardinal's second baseman, hasn't entirely recovered from his appendicitis operation

FOXX OUT OF IT—The gathering for local baseball rivalry this afternoon will miss big Jimmy Foxx, the Red Sox slugging first baseman, who is in a Philadelphia hospital with sinus trouble. Other Sox pictures on Page 13.



READY TO GO—Jack Wilson, Red Sox stocky right-hander, took the hill for the Yankeymen against the Bees at National League Field this afternoon. Wilson has missed greatness in the past due to wildness but, according to reports, he is in for a good year.

Garden Proposes Farr-Pastor Fight

New York, April 17 (AP)—James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden promoter, today offered an offer to Ted Broadribb, manager of Tommy Farr, for a New York bout late in June or July between Farr, conqueror of Max Baer, and Pastor of New York.

Johnston originally had offered Farr, who holds the British empire heavyweight title, bouts with Pastor or John Henry Lewis, the light-heavyweight champion. Broadribb replied he was not interested in a match with Lewis, but asked how much Pastor would want to go to England to meet Farr, and how much Farr and Pastor would draw in New York.

The Hose were minus the services of Jimmy Foxx, their slugging first-sacked, but much to everyone's surprise Mel Almada appeared in the line-up.

CRONIN AT SHORT

The frail senor had been in the hospital recovering from the effects of a "beaning" earlier in the week, showed up unexpectedly this morning and was placed at first base.

Eric McNair, who was originally carded to spell Foxx, is suffering from a sore arm.

Manager Joe Cronin directed his charges from the shortstop post.

Bobby Doerr, 18-year-old marvel second sacked from San Diego, and Pinkey Higgins ex Muskman, completed the inner defense.

In the outfield was the veteran "Doc" Cramer in center, flanked by two newcomers, Fabyan Gaffke in left and Buster Mills in right.

Bill McKechnie of the Bees held to the same supporting cast he has been feeding for the past week.

MAKE DEBUT

Doerr, Garms, DiMaggio, Mills and Higgins were making their first appearance in Boston uniforms, and of course drew most of the attention.

But old favorites weren't overlooked. They all received a royal welcome.

The Bees appeared in their new uniforms of gray that is slightly more snugly than last year. The trimmings are again blue and red.

The Sox took the game in exhibition style as far as clothes were concerned, wearing their old road uniforms.

The teams had two games booked in the Southland but neither took place.

NEW FACES

New faces in the Sox lineup include Eric McNair and Buster Mills in the outfield, "Pinky" Higgins at third base and Bobby Doerr at second.

The Bees will present for the first time Dave Garms at third base, Vince DiMaggio in center field and Milton Babe Fletcher as their regular first sacker.

The Bees defending city champions by virtue of having won the only game played in the 1936 series, enter the current engagement at almost full strength.

Billy Urbanski and Frank McGowan, while still somewhat below par physically, could be used in an emergency, and it's a question whether either would break into the lineup were he in the "pink."

INJURIES RIDDLE SOX

The Sox, on the other hand, are badly riddled by injuries. Jimmy Foxx, their mightiest slugger, is in a Philadelphia hospital being treated for a sinus attack that caused him all sorts of trouble in the south. It will be a week or more before he returns to first base.

Misfortune has dogged Cronin's footsteps on the spring even more persistently than it did last season. But the Texas Leaguer still has his chin up and a smile on his face.

He deserves a big hand.

There's no need for us to dwell at length on what we think of this year's crop of Boston ball players. We've been advising you on that subject since late in February.

You can now form your own opinions at the Hive this p. m. and at the Bees tomorrow.

There's be no pomp or ceremony. That will be saved for the opening of the championship races.

BOYS' Club Sextet TO RUN

DeMARS-TO-BE ALL UNDER 20

Veteran plodder of many miles in his long and successful period as a marathon participant, Clarence De Mar will seek his eighth B. A. A. marathon victory on Monday.

And in the same race will be a group of six youths from the Boys' Club of Boston, with ages ranging from 16 to 19, who'll be trying for their first victory.

These lads are better known as Nate Hurwitz Harriers after the popular athletic director of the Boys Club of Boston, Charlestown Branch.

Youngest of the group is Edward Lyons, sixteen years old, whose ambition is to win the Hopkinton-Boston grind. Maybe not this year or next but eventually.

Saugus Man Four Times In 1st 10

New England's most consistent marathoner—not Les Pawson, not Johnny Kelley—but Gordon A. Norman, of Saugus, was among the latest to send his entry blank in for the 41st annual Patriots' Day B. A. A. run.

One doesn't hear much about Norman. He has never won the famous Hopkinton to Boston grind.

But the Saugus plodder has a better record than either Kelley or Pawson, though he has never finished higher than fourth.

Norman was fourth in 1935, sixth in 1934, ninth in 1931 and 10th in 1930.

Entry List 211

Always well back in the field during the early stages of the race, the Saugus veteran comes fast over the closing miles to pass runner upon runner, and annually makes one wonder what he would do were he to go all out from the gun some day.

He was 9th in the recent North Medford 20 miles.

The entry list stood today at 211 a most commendable showing for a post Olympic year.

Practically every top-notcher of note is entered with the exception of benedict Billy McMahon of Worcester, who finished second in the B. A. A. run last year and who later won the Olympic tryout at Washington.

McMahon evidently has made good on his retirement threat.

The Finnish representation with Koski, Kyronen and some of those other old favorites having retreated to the fireside, is slim this season. Kauppinen and Dave Komonen carry the load on Monday.

Kauppinen also has given evidence of his prowess on the B. A. A. course. In 1929 and again in 1932 he finished 10th. Behind Johnny Kelley in 1935 he doggedly finished fifth.

Andre Brunelle of Medford, who finished 10th in 1935, and Anthony Pasicell of Revere, Presentation winner and self-styled "B. A. A. victor, the eighth man at Exeter street last April, were also among the late comers.

From Canada

Canada continued to flood the starters of Tom Kanaly with entry blanks, as the Forrest Hill A. A. of Toronto added Peter Gough and Lloyd Longman, the latter a last boy at shorter distances, and Komonen's Flood Mine A. C. in deep Ontario forwarded another runner —Armas Hook.

Quebec A. A. entered Art Morency, Napoleon Bimoneau and Henry Gauthier.

The Indian angle forced its way up through the litter of blanks once more as Chief Fleetfoot Red Thundercloud, bosom friend of Tarzan Brown, from Newport, R. I., announced his first competitive start.

Unlike Brown, Thundercloud is not of Narragansett lineage, but a full-blooded Ogallala-Sioux.

Dog Races Motorcycle Garden Show

Earl "Lucky" Teter, auto daredevil coming to the Boston Garden next Wednesday, with "Prince," the dog which races a motorcycle in the Teter show. It was while demonstrating how this race takes place at the Garden that Teter crashed into the wall and was injured so badly he had to be taken to the Relief Hospital.

Jokes While Being Stitched

Accident Fails to Deter Daredevil Lucky Teter

Lucky Teter, world's most famous daredevil, who was injured in an unscheduled accident that took place in the Boston Garden while he was limbering up with a few preliminary stunts, was in top shape today as he marked 12 more stitches down on his records today to swell the already large total of 158 loops of cat gut.

Teter, who comes to the Boston Garden next Wednesday with his troupe of internationally famous Hell Drivers for an engagement of four evening performances and a Saturday matinee, joked with Dr. Williams at the Haymarket Relief station while the doctor sewed up the two bad gashes on the forehead and jaw.

Teter stated to the doctor that his handiwork compared favorably with the artistry of some of the best medical hemslitchers in the country.

Dr. Williams facetiously returned that he would "bet that few of them had ever written 'Welcome to Boston' on his forehead with so beautiful a scroll." The Doc sewed Teter up with that one.

Teter reaffirmed today that nothing would be left out of his performance and that the regular 20 acts of shuddering, crashing, over and over driving would be presented as thrillingly as it was for the Grantland Rice Sports Reel—he has promised a few additional stunts that will be tried for the first time in Boston.

This is the first time that Teter has ever presented the show under cover, and he hopes it will not be his last. This will also be the first time that he has had to wrestle the wall as well as several hundred pounds of automobile all at the same time.

In his bout with the wall yesterday, Teter came out the loser, but he hopes his future encounters will be victorious.

Teter has figured that by throwing the throttle of his car wide-open in the exposition building, adjoining the Garden arena, he will be able to speed into the building at the rate of a mile-a-minute—the speed necessary to perform his stunts successfully.

As well as Teter's stunts—he performs eight out of the twenty-one stunts himself—there will be "Demon" Davis and "Daredevil" Daniels, the alliterative wonders of the world who perform seemingly impossible stunts on motorcycles, such as jumping a truck and two motorcycles in one mammoth leap.

"Pull Motor" Paul will permit a five-ton truck to run both wheels over his chest while it is traveling at a rate of speed to exceed 40 miles per hour. A head-on crash will be one of the highlights of the evening.

Two cars will be purchased here in Boston and there will be drivers inside them at all times, even during the impact.

These are only a few of the many hair-raising antics that these speed disciples of Teter's will perform to supply the crowd with 2 hrs. of thrills at each performance. Oh yes, and Lucky—be careful of that Garden wall because they want to hold hockey games there next winter.

CASEY Whips Wright ON MAT

CLARK LIVENS GARDEN GO

Only out of his sick bed a week, Steve encountered more than he bargained for in Paul Bowser's bi-weekly wrestling show at the Garden.

The Kerry giant got through his regular fray with Rube Wright of Texas all right, winning in straight falls, but it was his extra-curricular activity that must have irked, if not annoyed him.

At the ringside was George Dazzler Clark, voluble Scot, who kept heckling Steve and playfully poking him with canes as he and Steve was disposing of the Texan.

And at the end of the second fall, which Casey took in 26 27 (as it did the first), Clark sailed into the ring and staged an impromptu battle with the Irishman in which police and spectators soon participated.

Clark may get a chance at Casey in an orthodox battle shortly.

The Prelims

Billy Bartush set a new world record when he lasted 11 minutes against Tor Johnson, 260-pound Swede, in the semi-final.

Nick Lutze and Gino Garibaldi wrestled to a 30-minute draw.

Wee Willie Davis, giant Armenian, threw Pat Kelly in 12:18.

Jimmy Sarandos, unbeaten Greek, tossed Pat Reilly in 10:26.

Marvin Westenberg defeated Tom Hanley in 17:41.

RED SOX Rout Crusaders BEFORE 7000

Worcester, April 17—Bob Daughters and Gene Desautels, Holy Cross products, were in the Red Sox lineup at Fitton Field as the Boston major leaguers defeated Jack Barry's 1937 Crusaders, 5 to 0, before a gathering of 7000.

Most of the goody crowd came to cheer Daughters and Desautels, both of whom attained stardom on Mt. St. James.

Daughters, who played for Holy Cross last year, played third base and angled his first time up. After that he went hitless in four more tries and kicked in with a spree of errors neither damaging.

Desautels, who has been out of Holy Cross since 1935 was passed three times and sent home on a fourth time at bat. A sacrifice was also marked against him.

Rookie Fabian Gaffke of the Red Sox was the day's heavy hitter with a triple and a home run. He drove in three of the Boston runs. Colonel Buster Mills another Red Sox freshman outfielder, batted in another.

Coach Fred Mitchell sends his Harvard baseball team to the slaughter this afternoon as one of the strongest American league teams comes to Soldiers Field to initiate "College Ladies' Day."

Stumped by wayful hurling and unable to plug even weak outfield gaps, Coach Mitchell has revamped his lineup in a last ditch effort to make a winning spree for the team which reached an all-time low last Wednesday by collecting only six hits the entire day. We a hard pitching N. U. Lads scored a 9 to 7 upset.

Reigning Paul Bowie, ace varsity catcher, Mitch has inserted the hard-hitting Al Colicchi, star first-baseman of last year's team, who relinquished his berth with the coming to the varsity Ulysses Bilodeau.

A four catcher in prep school, Colicchi has developed fast in recent weeks and is expected to provide the Harvards with the spark missing all season.

The infield, comprised of veterans and two sophomores, will be kept intact for today's game but it is probable that this aggregation will be shaken up in the event it does not exhibit the brand of ball Coach Mitchell believes it capable of playing.

Jim Sullivan, veteran outfielder who missed the U. game because of conflicting examinations, will be back at his right field post.

"Sully" hasn't been quite up to form so far this season but started to show old time flashes against Columbia last week and is being relied upon to give the Harvard outfield the balance it missed Wednesday.

While the left field spot, held down to date by Remo Grondahl, is still a question mark, the flashy sophomore will be given an opportunity a chance to display good form this afternoon or give way before the heavy hitting of Dave Ingall.

Bill Ingalls ace moundsman of the defeated staff will open for Harvard. Ed is undefeated so far. He scored easy victories over George Washington and Columbia in the Easter recess trip, but was batted around rather freely by B. U. after relieving Dick Walsh in the fifth inning.

Opposing Harvard this afternoon will be Dick Bell, a veteran pitcher who has been in one great game this season. Dick has scored a couple of fancy victories in his season-game winning streak of Princeton hurlers, and a win did as savage edge over the Harvard pitcher.

The rest of the Princeton lineup is made up of five veterans and three sophomores. Captain Dean Hall in center field, Kenny Sandbach second baseman, Jimmy Coubet, shortstop, First Baseman Bill Fallon and Catcher Rolf Paine all faced Harvard in two losing contests last season.

The game marking an innovation in collegiate athletics, is expected to be viewed by 500 ladies who will be admitted upon payment of a 1 per cent federal tax.

FELLER EAGER TO SEE ZOO

Cleveland Star Unspoiled

Good for 15 Years, He Figures

Joe Cook and Bob Feller Hit High C.

New York, April 17 — "What kind of zoo they got here in New York," Bobby Feller asked, peering out the window of his 29th floor hotel room. "I'd like to have time to see it, but I guess I'll only get time to see Radio City. They say that's pretty good, too."

Yeah, I'm throwing them a little different this year. I got a slightly longer motion, I guess, but so much either in my pitching as last year.

"But my arm isn't really strong yet. Some of the old fellows were telling me that a pitcher's arm isn't strong until a month after the season opens."

[illegible] stood clear of the hotel [illegible] showed me a few [illegible] weird here to the effect that the Giants probably do not want to be around to witness Master Feller in his full growth, judging from the way they waved flunkingly at his pitches during the spring season.

We asked Bobby if he ever though of failure, in the midst of this widespread belief that he would be one of the great all time pitchers.

He waited a moment before he answered.

"Sure, lots of times. Lots of times."

Perhaps, through his mind, was running the picture of his returning to Van Meter, Iowa, as a bust.

"That's what keeps me hearing down all the time. That's why I don't drink or fool around.

"It all depends on my arm. If it holds up I'm all set. Yeah, maybe 10 or 15 years, if my arm holds up.

"I'm not going to try to learn too fast. I mean I might hurt my arm if I try this slow stuff at first.

"I'm just going to keep bearing down on the fast one, and the curve. There's plenty of time for that slow stuff."

We asked him what he was doing with all his dough.

"I haven't made much yet, but if I have a good year I ought to do all right. I've bought some insurance with some of it, but I don't believe in cramping yourself just to buy insurance, do you?"

Master Feller now probably stands close to Mr. Roosevelt in the matter of green scrips this spring. He graduate from Van Meter High in May.

"I kept up with that school work down south. They're going to let me have a couple days off when the team is in Chicago in May, and I'm going down home to graduate.

"Naw, I'm not going to college. Most of the kids who go to college just go 45 have a good time, and the others go to get a business, see?

"Well, I got a business, if my arm holds up, and baseball's fun.

English is his hardest study.

"One of those magazine fellows said I drove my new car around at 90 and 100 miles an hour. Where did he get that stuff from? I rarely go over 70 or 80, like everybody else."

Watch BRADLEY IN Derby

By TRACKMAN

Here's a Derby tip, "Watch Bradley"! The stately master of Idle Hour Farm, Colonel Edward Riley Bradley, is again pointing for the Kentucky Derby to be run at Churchill Downs, May 8.

Bradley, only owner to win the Derby four times, with Bubbling Over Burgoo King and Broker's Tip, will strive to win his fifth Derby with two excellent prospects in Brooklyn and Billionaire.

These two thoroughbreds have watered well in the Blue Grass country and are being prepped for the trek that leads to Derby Day. Thompson . . . Brooklyn is bred to run as fast and as far as any banktrail while Billionaire looks more like the speed hors type.

Gold Spray Choice in Fourth

By DAVE WILSON
Selections for Fast Track

BEST BET—MICRO, 1ST RACE

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 17—Micro, a lightly raced daughter of Haste and Wayabout, owned by Hymie Neusteter, needs only an equal shake in racing luck to click at juicy odds in the four and one-half furlongs of the opening stanza here on Monday.

Micro wests indifferent maiden juveniles of the $2500 top variety in Monday's race. Breaking from No. 1 stall, she needs only a bustling ride from Apprentice Ralph Ecard to lead from flagfall to wire

FIRST—Micro, Local Boy, Frank Brooke

MICRO will probably have LOCAL BOY to down for major honors. The latter belongs to the powerful Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt stable. He finished a distant fourth to Radio Charm, Bunny Baby and Brown Moth in his initial start only a few days back FRANK BROOKE, third to Royal Rhapsody and Hunting Horse in last race, should go very well.

SECOND—Acautaw, Cherry Stone, Bally Bay

Just have to give ACAUTAW one more chance. This old Maryland favorite met with serious interference in his last start, but closed gamely to finish a fast-going third to Golden Vein and Happy Hostess. CHERRY STONE, a Vandybilt castoff, has been away fro mthe races since last Fall at Bowie, but trials indicate that she is fit and ready. BALLY BAY was a right shifty sort in this same company last year. However, I have no recent line on condition and third will have to do for this one.

THIRD—Sweet Desire, My Elsie, Cafe For.

SWEET DESIRE, a royally bred filly from the Homar Stable, could pull a wagon and down a field of this calibre in Maryland last fall. MY ELSIE was pitted a trifle too ambitiously in her last start. Going back to a previous second to Mary Keen at Bowie, the Shandoah colt's forbearer looms all over the main danger. CAFE FOR made a show of Lina's Son and others in her last start, winning by five lengths. No telling just how good she may be.

FOURTH—Gold Spray, Felwyn, Flying Dere.

GOLD SPRAY, which just missed doubling Jinx in a swiftly run six furlongs sprint last Friday, is let into this event under a feather of 100 pounds This way weighted the Denemark color - bearer should never leave the result in doubt. FELWYN, on general Bowie form, shapes up slightly better than FLYING DERE in fight for place honors. The latter is really the class of the race, but I doubt if she is capable of spotting the top selections 20 pounds in actual weight.

FIFTH—Genie Palatine, Bootless, Treford

GENIE PALATINE, a jewel of consistency was beaten two and one half lengths for main honors by New Deal, Maiden Lad and Kenty in a swiftly run mile and 70 yards test only a few days back. That effort was Genie's first since Tropical Park. BOOTLESS, making a first start since last fall, was heavily backed in the above mentioned race, but finished out badly in the late stages as if she needed the race. TREFORD was a right shifty hide in this company around Maryland last fall. He worked a mile in 1:43 hard held for a final.

SIXTH—Inflee, Rollick, Copper Tube

INFILEE, fourth to Pretty Busy, Top High and Justa Play in his last race, did fare badly that day considering the calibre of her opponents. The Shrewbridge bred-winner meets platers of her own class here. ROLLICK did not fancy the muddy footing that prevailed in the Bowie final. In a previous race, the Canter gelding finished a close third to Departed and Dormido. COPPER TUBE, outclassed in the high figures, well on previous top form at New Orleans.

Braving Danger, McIlester, Cosgrove Entry

SEVENTH—BRAVING DANGER, a dear limited with the Crown Bound for major honors in her most recent endeavor. The A. C. Compton colorbearer takes only two additional pounds here, and under smooth handling should go on to an easy triumph. ILCHESTER, a Maryland favorite, won his last race in hand, but he has meeting nothing quiet as formidable as the top selection. IDLE ALONG and BATTLING GIRI will run coupled as the Cosgrove stable entry. Both horses figure well.

Predict Banner Year for Major Leagues

New York, April 17 (AP)—From New York's champions to Philadelphia's last-placers, it looks like a banner year for big league baseball.

The injury jinx is striking the only sour note in the swing perfection of opening day by keeping key men out of several lineups for the getaway program Monday and Tuesday.

Otherwise those who direct, play and second-guess the national pastime are convinced the 1937 campaign will go down in the books among the top years, competitively, financially and from all other angles.

They feel that the diamond machinery will be in high gear from the time President Roosevelt gets the Athletics-Senators game under way in Washington Monday, and the Phillies and Bees go to work in a pair of Patriots Day contests in Boston until the final out next September—and that the faithful will respond accordingly.

250,000 for Opener

Some 250,000 fans may be on deck for the double opener, with a seven-game schedule Tuesday following Monday's curtained program. The biggest crowd, a lookout for 50,000 or so, is expected at the New York Yankee stadium, where the world champions entertain their personal headaches, the Senators.

Another good-sized gathering is almost certain for the renewal of the Giants-Dodgers feud in Brooklyn. In the last few days the experts have been hard put to keep up with the possibilities as a result of the epidemic of colds and ailments.

Joe DiMaggio, key man of the Yanks, will be out for two weeks recovering from an appendectomy. Tuesday's pitcher, will be set for a month with a chipped right ankle bone.

Jimmy Foxx, hospital infinitely suffering from a sinus condition, replaces Tommy Bridges of the Tigers in left field, and Stu Martin, St. Louis Cardinals' infielder, hasn't completely recovered from his appendicitis operation.

All are members of clubs figuring strongly in the pennant chases, and without them things may be changed completely for those outfits.

Tighter Race

As matters now stand, the Yankees, Detroit Tigers same heavyduty outfit that took both the American League and World Series apart in '36, look like a shoo-in for the league setup, but certainly not by the 19½-game margin of a year ago.

The Tigers with Mickey Cochrane and Hank Greenberg back on the firing line, and the Indians, with Rookie Bob Feller, biggest freshman pitching sensation in years, a potential 15 to 20-game winner, furnish the top threats. A possible explosive force are the Boston Red Sox, especially if their rookies produce.

The Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates look from this younger like the teams Terry's group will have to beat to keep the flag.

The Bucs have had the stuff for four years, but haven't used it properly. If Pittsburgh can keep on its collective toes and help along an improved pitching staff, the Smoky City can surprise them all. The Cubs, with Rip Collins filling in a huge gap at first base, lent, provided Carleton's elbow doesn't wreck the fine hurling corps. Cincinnati's bustling Reds, young and full of fight, have a fine chance to crack the first division.

Record Due to Fall in Alley Tilt

New York, April 17 (AP)—The American Bowling Congress may be shaken by a major eruption over its week-end as some of the most famous bowlers take their turn on the tournament alleys.

The five-man team had by Detroit's Krakow Furniture Company team which went to the top a week ago with a 3,118 total, stood up against last night's shocks, but new second and third-place teams barged into the standings along with a new top combination in doubles and several other first-ten bowlers in the minor events.

Such teams as the record-smashing Hell Products team of Milwaukee, led by the match-game champion, Hank Marino; the famed Syrohs Bohemians of Detroit; the Pabst Blue Ribbon team of Milwaukee, paced by Frank Benkovic, coholder of the tournament doubles record and two quintet greats, Skang Mercurio's alleys in Cleveland are just a few of the top-rank combinations to appear tonight and tomorrow.

One of the best squads of five-man teams on the tournament record last night sent the Windy City Bowling Association quintet of Cicero Hill, into second place with a 3,063 total and the Behringer Diamonds team of Buffalo into third with 3086.

Cubs Buy Catcher From Coast

Chicago, April 17 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs today purchased Johnny Bottarini, catcher, from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. He will arrive by plane tomorrow with Newell Kimball, a right-handed pitcher, returned to his Cubs by the Angels. Bottarini will assist Kennedy O'Dea in relieving "Gabby" Hartnett, who is ailing from a sore shoulder.

WALKER Going Great GUNS

Chicago, April 17 (AP)—Is it true what they're saying about Dixie?

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox yells a jubilant "Yes, Siree," White Sox fans are shouting "I told you so" and Owner Lou Comiskey smiles sagely.

So let's review his case and then see what Dixie himself—Dixie Walker, fleet sox outfielder—has to say about it.

Walker has been one of baseball's top ranking "hard luck" players Brought up to the New York Yankees in 1931, he filled in for the then-ailing Babe Ruth several weeks and was sent back to Toledo for experience.

He came back in 1933 and played brilliantly in about 300 games before the injury jinx got his number.

Out in 1934

Walker hurt his throwing arm a few weeks before the season ended and he played in only one game in 1934. In 19335 he played sensationally in early season games and then injured his flipper again in an exhibition tilt.

The Yanks, apparently figuring him through as a major leaguer, sold him "down the river" to the White Sox for about $7500 May 1, 1936, and Dixie celebrated by getting married the next day.

He hadn't succeeded, however, in shaking his hard-luck bugaboo. Less than a month of the 1936 season had gone before he injured his arm so painfully—this time so seriously he had to undergo a serious operation in which a limp muscle was shortened.

When he reported for training this spring he was worried about his arm—but he's not worried now.

Arm Feels Fine

"I've been going pretty good," he drawled, "and maybe I'm due for a little good luck. My arm feels fine, and probably will get stronger. I weigh 15 pounds less than I did last season and feel that much better. We got a great club here this year and I only hope I'm able to help it along as best I can."

Dykes, the fans and owner Comiskey think he will and his record this spring bears them out. He's been hitting brilliantly, playing sensational defensive ball and looks like one of the best outfield prospects the Sox have had in years. In yesterday's game with the Chicago Cubs he leaded out a homer with two mates on base.

McSpaden Named For Ryder Team

A select group of 12 professional golfers from whom will be chosen the last four members of the United States Ryder cup team, today had been named by George Jacobus, president of the professional golfers' association.

From the group, the four will be selected on the basis of their medal play in regular American tournaments preceding Ryder cup play, the first two rounds of the P. G. A. championship at Oakmont and the four rounds of the U. S. open.

Those upon whom four will be selected were Harold McSpaden, Winchester; Craig Wood, New York; Ralph Guldahl, St. Louis; Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa.; Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N. J.; Jimmy Hines, Long Island; Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa.; Ky Laffoon, Chicago; Ellis Ruiz, Santa Monica, Cal.; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; Dick Metz, Chicago; Ed Dudley and Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs. The winner of either tournament would automatically be chosen.

The first six Ryder cup players have already been selected. They are Denny Shute, West Newton; Tony Manero, Salem; Higdon Smith, Chicago; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., and Gene Sarazen, East Brookfield.

[There's no skipping the fact that it will be a pretty busy afternoon tomorrow for the Holland at St. Elizabeth's hospital.

GEORGE HOLLAND

Here he was, offered ambulance service to the Hotel Touraine, stretcher bearers, and Jim Roosevelt as personal attendant to push him in a wheel chair into initiation rites of Brookline Lodge No. 189, Loyal Order of Moose, for their induction, with 18 others. But Doc Norton put on the frowg.

George said there's nothing in the rumor that a new, Jean Harlowy nurse arriving on the floor had anything to do with the case, but it'll bear looking into.]

Gold in Them Waves:

Jean Harlow On Loew's Screens

By PEGGY DOYLE

It's almost unbelievable that Director William S. Van Dyke, who has given us such hilarious masterpieces as "Libeled Lady" and "The Thin Man," is responsible for "Personal Property," the new State and Orpheum screen feature.

A drama that fails to jell is bad enough but a rowdy comedy without a single laugh is a serious crime against society And Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor and, definitely, Director Van Dyke share the guilt in "Personal Property."

They can't blame it on the story, for O. P. Heggie found it an excellent stage vehicle and Robert Montgomery was grand in it when it was called "The Man in Possession."

• • •

Remember it? A pretty but poor American widow, La Harlow, goes to London to snare a rich husband. Her victim is Reginald Owen, stuffy Britisher who is known as the ladies' underwear king, a circumstance which gives him endless opportunity to convulse (?) dinner-parties by announcing, "I'm in ladies' underwear."

• • •

The Widow Harlow's financial difficulties are becoming increasingly serious as the wedding-day looms The bailiff, Forrester Harvey, and his assistant, according to English law, have taken possession of her house until her bills are paid

The pretty, heart-stopping Robert Taylor, younger brother of the lady's fiance, is, of all people, the bailiff's assistant and it is he who has established residence in her debt-ridden domicile. America's favorite Romeo is "Bad Boy" Taylor in this one—he has just completed a brief jail sentence and his father and stuffed-shirt brother have tossed him out of the house.

But don't think Robert doesn't go romantic. It is because he is so lovelorn that he has promoted the bailiff's assistant job for himself. He woos the widow as he waits on her. He even offers to hustle for her at the dinner she gives for her fiance's family—and he serves dinner to his mother, father and brother among others.

Taylor, whom even the sloof Garbo loves (see "Camille" ads), is an inept a comedian as he is skilled at celluloid lovemaking.

Chester Morris is a submarine officer and Richard Dix, the U. S. Navy's Grade-A deep sea diver in Columbia's "Devil's Playground" companion picture on the Loew theaters' current program

Dolores Del Rio, cast as a taxi dance hall hostess, marries Dix and then makes love to Morris when her bridegroom is absent on sea duty. Morris doesn't know who she is until Dix makes the proud introduction. The discovery for a time threatens to permanently split up their friendship

Here's Screen's Latest Find

Fernand Gravet makes a gala bow to American movie fans in his debut film, "The King and the Chorus Girl," current feature at the Paramount and the Fenway. With him in the above scene is Joan Blondell, who shares honors with him.

D'Oyly Carte 'Iolanthe' Sterling

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Iolanthe," believed by many Gilbert-and-Sullivanatics to be the fastest dish in the Savoyards' banquet of wit, humor and melody, was last night's enthusiastically received presentation at the Colonial theater. It is the fifth performance in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's current repertory, and a noble dish it is, to be sure.

It found last night's audience the most ready, attuned and minded since Monday's opening quite as much due to its charm as was Martin Green's lord chancellor to Phyllis, his ward in chancery.

The curtain rises on a beautiful sylvan scene, where a chorus of fairies, their dead garb of soft green chiffons phase in their dancing to speak of Iolanthe who has been banished from fairyland for marrying a mortal They have persuaded their queen to forgive her and to bring her back from the bottom of a stream where she has lived for the past 25 years.

Iolanthe's son, Strephon (son of her marriage with a mortal, now a young man of 24 and the fairies' pet), comes to see him.

His brother, played with grace and distinction by Elizabeth Nickell-Leon, introduces Strephon whose fairyhood is the source of his existence

Leon Randa presents Strephon's problem, with touching tunefulness. He loves Phyllis the Arcadian shepherdess and ward in chancery, who is unaware that he is half-mortal and half-fairy.

But Strephon's problem becomes really serious when the highly susceptible chancellor, who finds it quite exasperating "giving agreeable girls away" refuses his consent to the marriage

The second act opens with Private Willis, on sentry duty in the Palace Yard, soliloquizing about the necessity of an M. P. leaving his brain outside when he enters the House of Parliament.

Preston Foster Given Francis Film Role

Los Angeles, April 17—Preston Foster was promised the breaks by his studio when he threatened a sit-down strike a few weeks ago—and he's getting them.

RKO up to that time was never so wrong to lend him to outside studios, but now everything is different. Preston moves over to Warner Brothers to play the male lead opposite Kay Francis in "Give Us This Night."

Louella O. Parsons

First Lady" is a real break for the rest of the Foster family, for Preston is different from anything the pre-reopable Press has been before played

The actual papers will be signed today following a meeting of Sam Bischoff, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis Meanwhile the cast consists of Kay Francis as the title role Verna Francis as her arch rival, with Louise Fazenda as the first choice for the bombastic femme reformer named Louella

The past year hasn't been a very lucky one for Ann Dvorak, what with the mutual cancellation of her contract with Warners, Leslie Fenton's serious illness and many other upsetting things. But it looks as though the bad breaks were over at last for Ann's husband signed Ann's contract and now is going to be a star. Ann's next picture will be "Tale of Love," which she will be starred with Ian Hunter as the leads of same. Jeanne is expecting those breaks and better things . . .

It also gives clear directions for contest procedure so that newcomers among contestants will not feel ill at ease but will be able to join the more experienced boys with a feeling of comraderie.

Methods of determining the winners, how to win red or blue ribbon awards and Ace bars are set forth.

Pictured on the inside of the front cover is the trophy to be won by the New England champion and the list of prizes which include an all expense paid trip to Atlanta, Georgia, to participate in the national championships there in August and nine medals—three gold, three silver and three bronze.

Plans for a 10-inch Douglas O-38 solid scale model may be obtained by Junior Birdmen builders for the asking, if return postage is enclosed. These detailed drawings are the same used in the recent Douglas scale model contest won by Chester Thomas of Lawrence. They were made by Herbert Weiss, M. A. T. aeronautical engineering student and have been widely endorsed among Junior Birdmen for their accuracy.

• • •

Uncle Sam's Pursuiters' Squadron of Somerville is planning a model plane flying contest for next Tuesday, under the direction of Sponsor Morris Fama of 66 Pearl street. Models will be flown in the North Eastern junior high school.

Douglas Fama, nephew of the sponsor, is the squadron commander.

• • •

Angelo Cevera and Joseph Raney, charter members of the Sky Riders' squadron of Brighton, recently tested flying models with only one propeller, a crash against a lamp post. Paul Sweeney and Carl Jewer are also constructing model planes. Cyril is regarded as the brighter star buster.

Following an aviation vocabulary test, using terms from the Junior Birdmen Aviation Dictionary, Julius Ousley recently entertained members with a short tap dance. Ralph "Bucky" Jordan played the harmonica. Ruth Johnston and Aquinas "Tarzan" Maloney each read an original aeronautical poem.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

RULES about wild animals in the studios are being violated tonight (WNAC) it seems, when Joe Cook shares his sound sanctum spotlight with some seals from the circus. These trained fin flappers are scheduled to play musical instruments during the hour, meaning between 9.30 and 10:30 p. m.

Quite a variety setting has been made ready by Cook, with two prominent baseball pitchers in the loudspeaker lineup. Bob Feller, the scrappy Cleveland flinger, and Carl Hubbell, the New York Giants' ace, are among the program guests, as well as Albert Spaulding, one of the world's leading violinists. Feller and Hubbell have another important score to settle for tomorrow when they oppose each other for the Cleveland-New York exhibition game.

SONG SETTING

The International Chorus, a group of 30 mixed voices, under the direction of Victor Larsen, will broadcast a series of four programs (WMEX) beginning this evening. The chorus will be heard every Saturday from 8.45 to 9.15 p. m.

The members of the above chorus represent 15 nationalities, and many of them are well known in their own countries. Their program will comprise songs of several nations.

As a result of his appearance with Floyd Gibbons on "Your Adventure," Michael Brady of Kansas City got a new job. A mining engineer, Brady mentioned, at the mike, that he'd like to return to Mexico. Listening that night was a man who has a new mining venture in Mexico. He got in touch with Brady at once.

Not many people dress in keeping with moods. Jessica Dragonette does! The charming soprano, who was recently named the best dressed woman in radio, wears soft blues and grays on days when she is tired and needs serenity.

When the world seems rosy and she feels radiant, Jessica wears vivid reds and yellows.

• • •

Richard Bonelli, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will offer "Song of the Open Road," "Irish Names" and "When I Grow Too Old to Dream" in the new edition of the "Universal Rhythm" program, starting tonight (WEEI) at 7.30 p. m.

Bonelli will be featured on the show, with Alec Templeton, blind pianist; the Landt Trio, and Rex Chandler's Orchestra rounding out the cast.

AIR ANNIVERSARY

The First Radio Parish Church, Reverend Howard O. Hough, director, will celebrate its 11th anniversary on the airwaves tomorrow during its regular WCOP broadcast at 10:15.

Honored guests will include President Kenneth C. Ellis of Bowdoin University, Lieutenant-Governor Frank Hayes of Connecticut, Mayor Charles Murphy of New Britain, Governor Lewis Barrows of Maine, Gerard Slattery of WCOP, Frank Milne of WEEI, and Miss Bertha Cassidy, famed missionary of Wuhu, China . . . There is also a possibility that Gov. Hurley will join the program from the studios of WCOP.

One of the highlights will include the reading of a letter to Rev. Mr. Hough from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

PUTNEY Farm Land REBUILT

The Putney Labor Camp, devoted to boys and girls of high school and college age, offers them a chance to work together at something constructive and useful and to take part in various forms of recreation.

Located at the Putney School, Elm Lea Farm, three miles from the little village of Putney, Vt., the camp comprises 600 acres of field and forest, with many buildings for the needs of the farm and school.

The visitors are given the opportunity to paint, build, care for animals, work in the hayfield or gardens or do housework.

Here they are trained in the arts, music, dramatics. A square dance every two weeks is always keenly enjoyed.

Parties go for horseback riding or mountain climbing, along the Long Trail or the Youth Hostel trails.

A resident nurse and a doctor, who make weekly inspections, look out for the campers.

In 1835, the country house was converted into an academy building; the carriage house became a science building and workshop; the sugar house became a store. Classrooms and dormitories sprang up.

Now the whole group of buildings and the well-planned lawns have a beauty that leaves one speechless.

By ELLEN PHILLIPS, Exeter, Vermont.

One dollar will be sent for the above story.

OVERSIGHT SPOILS DRAMATIC MELEE

(A SHORT STORY)

Paddy, Public Enemy No. 1, moved slowly, cautiously, along the dark, gloomy hallway. Drawing near the foot of a decrepit stairway, he paused, looked fearfully around him and then proceeded to ascend. A revolver was clutched in his left hand.

At the head of the stairs, he looked for Room No. 27, found it and smiled sardonically. This was Slug Mason's hideout.

Slug did not know Paddy had discovered he was a stool-pigeon. He would soon find out!

Paddy knocked gently on the door panel.

"Who's there?" asked Slug from within.

"Your pal Paddy. Open up!"

"Oh, Paddy? Just a minute!" Slug inserted a key, and the door opened.

"You dirty rat!" snarled Paddy. He pulled the trigger of the revolver, but the revolver, however, did not go off.

"Now, cut!" bellowed the director of Superior Films. "A perfectly good scene, and it has to be spoiled by some old dotard forgetting to fill the gun with blanks!"

By H. O'LEARY, 19 Worthington St., Cambridge.

$2 dollar will be sent for the above short story.

Portraits OF City Folk

(A book review of "The Old Bunch," by Meyer Levin. The Viking Press, New York.)

Meyer Levin has written a mighty interesting novel with a Chicago background and everyday people.

His character delineations are true to life and he paints a vivid picture of modern American life and how it affected "The Old Bunch."

You learn about Sol Meisel, Sam Eisen, Runt Plotkin, Joe Freedman, Mitch Weiner, Lou Green, Lou Margolis, Rube Muskowitz and others, their ups and downs, their loves and hates, their failures and successes.

Like the country and the big city in which they live, they are sometimes happy, sometimes sad, carrying on for better or for worse and not quite knowing what all the hustle-bustle is about.

Studying the types as offered by Mr. Levin, one easily find their counterparts right here in Boston. We feel happy for those of "The Old Bunch" who succeed honestly and sad for those who fail to make good where a cruel fate intervenes.

"The Old Bunch" are fundamentally like the boys and girls with whom you and I grew up.

GEORGE GORE FIRST BASEBALL HOLDOUT

A New England player is credited with being baseball's first holdout.

George Gore, born in Maine about 85 years ago, was a great player in the '70s and '80s.

He was playing with New Bedford of the old New England League in 1878 when he was informed that the Chicago club of the National League had purchased him.

A. G. Spalding, manager of the Chicagoans, met Gore in Boston to settle the contract matter. Spalding, George asked Spalding for $2500, but was greatly discouraged when the manager set $1500 as the highest figure.

There was quite a controversy between the two. Gore still wanted $2500 and Spalding finally raised his offer to $1900. Spalding advised Gore that it was absolutely the limit, and Gore, realizing it, agreed to the sum.

Compared to present-day standards, the difference between Gore's sum and Spalding's offer was a meager sum.

Gore was the N. L. batting champion in 1880, when he had an average of .365.

The Leader OF Hunting Dogs

The setter is truly a remarkable canine, capable of doing the duties of two or three breeds of hunting dogs.

Whereas other breeds, such as beagles, spaniels and hounds, can each perform only one given duty, almost every setter can do the three most important hunting tasks: pointing, flushing and retrieving.

A setter points when he catches scent of the prey and raises a forepaw, stretches his tail out straight behind and points his nose directly to the prey.

He freezes in this pose until the hunter either fires or gives another command. The command is usually, "Flush," whereupon the setter bounds into the bush and scares up the prey.

If the marksman is successful and brings down the bird, the dog will retrieve it and lay it unharmed at his master's feet.

Besides these regular jobs, this versatile dog can be taught more tasks and tricks than any other dog can do.

When autumn leaves were falling,
And frost was drawing nigh,
A dozen great big ears of corn
I hung upstairs to dry.

They made; now I have naught
But just a dozen empty cobs,
Hanging in a row.
I'll have to plant those little mice
And see if they will grow.

Throne Hard To Regain

HUMAN SIDE OF THE NEWS

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Thrones are hard to recapture these days. The King business is not what it used to be. The case in point is that of Otto, by birth and blood Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, but by the implacable operations of destiny merely an unpedigreed-looking youth dwelling as an exile in Belgium.

From time to time we hear that Archduke Otto of the ill-fated House of Hapsburg is to be restored to the throne of Maria Theresa, that dauntless Empress, his ancestress, who held at bay even the Prussian Frederick the Great; but it appears now that Otto and his fiery mother, the former Empress Zita, may have to wait a long time if ever they arrive again at the power and the glory. For Otto's status and ambitions constitute a major problem in European politics.

The Hapsburg domains were constructed by the Peace of Versailles from the wreckage of the Austrian empire are definitely hostile to any suggestion of the restoration of the Hapsburgs. Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia have several times made it plain that they will fight rather than tolerate a Hapsburg restoration, which might imperil their territory and upset the status quo. Mussolini is said to look favorably on the idea of putting Otto on the throne, but even Il Duce doesn't care to risk a European war merely on a matter of sentiment.

ODDS AGAINST HIM

Hitler is cold to the suggestion because, without doubt, Nazi Germany still dreams of absorbing little Austria into the powerful German empire. And Somes the Austrian Chancellor, Kurt Schuschnigg, with the blunt statement that restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy must be deferred over his dead body, is not comes feasible. Austria needs peace, must have peace or shivers at the thought of the upset so the dice of diplomacy are loaded against the young man.

The sanguinary end of the Hapsburgs still holds away. If you ever visit Vienna and pay a visit to the Capuchin monastery, you would feel to the marrow of your imagination the malign power of the malediction hurled long, long ago at the Emperor Francis Joseph, by an enraged countess of the House of Karolyi. "For, in the dim cellars of the monastery, almost every Hapsburg for the past 400 years rests in his or her discovered coffin. It is the most historic and tragic private crypt in the world.

Much of the history of Europe is buried here along with the bones of the emperors and empresses and princes and princelets of the Hapsburg family. I know of no single spot in all Europe which so grips the imagination as this dusty, dim-lit, utterly silent resting place of the royal dead.

Over here, in one large chamber is the bronze coffin of that Hapsburg who held back the Turks centuries ago at the gates of Constantinople. One of the rows of coffins holds the body of the Hapsburg archduke who came nearer to defeating the great Napoleon than any general of his nation.

NAPOLEON'S OWN SON

In one of the simplest of all these repositories of the lifeless clay is L'Aiglon, Napoleon's own son, the King of Rome and an Austrian archduke by the blood of his Hapsburg mother, Napoleon's empress, Maria Louise. No magnificence in this Spring chamber. Coffin upon coffin in purposeless, careless heaps whose characters of the thrilling history whose sagas are of incredible tragedy.

There are two magnificent chambers in the great Hapsburg crypt. One is all old bronze, magnificently executed. It is the tomb of Austria's Gloriana, the great Empress Maria Theresa. It reminds one, somehow, of Dante's tomb in Verona, with its intricacy and splendor of its bronze work. Maria Theresa who fought Frederick the Great to the last gasp and, defeated, laid the foundation of modern Austria.

THE ILL-FATED THREE

A few steps more bring us to a splendid mausoleum of gleaming white marble—white marble everywhere, floor, walls and ceiling, carved monuments. And here lie the three members of the House of Hapsburg whose lives symbolized the incredible tragedy of that line. Francis Joseph, whose reign was so long it covered the age span of an ordinary lifetime. The beautiful Empress, victim of an assassin. Crown Prince Rudolph whose death in a hunting lodge in a forest near Vienna still excites the speculation of the romantic.

Uncovering An Author

P. G. Wodehouse, the creator of that prince of valets, Jeeves, and the writer of such hilarious novels as "Damsel in Distress" and "Piccadilly Jim," was born in Guildford, England, 56 years ago.

He received his education at Dulwich College. On graduating, he became a banker, but gave it up to try his hand at writing.

He served as columnist on the London Globe for six years. He started writing short stories and novels and was instantly a success.

Mr. Wodehouse is married and has one daughter, divides each year between England and America, and always writes the first 300 words of his novel a dozen times.

We used to wonder why Mr. Wodehouse kept his initials in front of his name and never let his public know what they stood for, but now we have found out they stand for Pelham Granville.

Around the World in 11 Years

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the 26th chapter of "Around the World in Eleven Years," the amazing best-seller book of the famous Abbe children. The story will continue daily in the American and Sunday Advertiser.

By PATIENCE, RICHARD and JOHN ABBE

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE cattle Uncle Bob thinks better of than any human being. He loves his cattle. These cattle are prize cattle and are very delicate like opera singers. You have to be careful of their nerves so that they will be beautiful when they go in the shows in October. Then Andy goes away with them to the shows and he marcelles their fur and arranges their curls on their noses and combs out their fluffs on their tails and polishes their hoofs so that the judges will agree that they are prizes.

Matador is the biggest prize of all. He hurt his foot so he has to stay in the corral. So they bring his wives to him there in the corral. He is not content there because he can't pick out the wives he wants, but has to take the ones they bring him. So he always puts on a dirty look behind his fence.

They also dip the sheep up at our barns in yellow water to de-louse them. They also dip the sheep dog also to delouse him. Because a sheep is a useful animal and gives them chops and wool to make sweaters and underwear.

Wild Turkeys

Uncle Bob has wild turkeys in the forest which are not allowed to be eaten. They sleep in the top of the trees at night and their enemies are bobcats who go in the trees and kill them. Bobcats are beige color and sneak through the forest at night. He is a coward and will only attack if cornered in a tree.

There has also about 200 deer on the ranch which are not allowed to be hunted and when the hunting season comes all the other deer come on his ranch.

There are eagles and hawks and bluebirds and blackbirds and wild canaries and humming-birds and other birds on this ranch. There are also herons over the lake which they swoop down to catch fish. There are ants that make big houses about half a foot high that are always busy. Grasshoppers fly in your face like dust when you walk over the hill. There are wasps that get in your food and you cannot live there are so many flies unless you have light screens. Uncle Bob has two falcons. They only eat meat and we were offered five cents apiece for mice and rats for them.

A pack-rat is not so ugly as a regular rat. He has a long, square yellow tooth that hangs over his under lip. And he is very sporting. He makes his living by stealing food and packing it away. Once Earl Tucker saw a pack-rat stealing some corn and he watched it very quietly to see what it would do. The little rat took what he wanted and then he came back with a straw and left it as a present in payment for the corn. We didn't know about pack-rats when we first came, so they stole our six heads of lettuce and our carrots we had in the cellar, in one night. It was too bad we didn't know they always left a present, otherwise we would have looked to see what they paid for the stuff they stole.

Mountain Lions

There are bears also here and mountain lions. But they stay away off from men. Rod Tucker shot a bear once and the skin is hanging in his parlor.

All animals run away from men, but they are not cowards like the bobcat, coyote or wild dog. Men are enemies to animals. The only animals that are enemies to men are rattlesnakes, cobra, the tiger and the chimpanzee. A chimpanzee once tore the sleeve out of Mamma's fur coat in Berlin. He had a red bottom and was a horrible animal.

There are chipmunks here, and squirrels and black squirrels and Jack rabbits and regular rabbits and porcupines and skunks and racoons and many beavers.

The beaver is a useful animal. He builds dams. He is also the busiest animal in the wild outside of the ant. He can saw down trees in one night for his dam, and he is a neat builder. They put wire around the trees they don't want the beavers to saw down with their teeth. The beavers swim every night in the lake to have some fun for themselves and when we called to them they slapped their flat tails on the water and dove. They can't dive unless they slap their tails.

Kill Rattlesnake

The first animal we saw was a rattlesnake with nine rattlers on his tail and Leonard killed him. We killed one ourselves the other day. He had eleven rattlers. Mr. Dillon hit him with a rock and broke his back. Then Patience took him on a long stick so we could get him better and then we all killed him with rocks. When they are hurt at you they curl themselves up in a ring and stick their black tongue out at you. They can jump the length of themselves and if they bite you you swell up like an elephant and if you don't put Uncle Bob's serum on it or permanganate potassium you will die. We figure if we got bitten, one of us would suck out the poison with our mouths and spit it out while the one else went for Uncle Bob.

But rattlesnakes are sporting to because they rattle at you to let you know first. Bull snakes are enemies to chickens but not to men. Hawks are enemies to chickens and fly down on them and break their wings and then grab them.

There are rocks on this ranch all red and look like lions and Punch and Judy and Indians. Then there are other tall rocks that look like churches. There are cottonwood trees and oak trees and pine trees and shaking aspe, scrub oak that grows in little bushes, all kinds of cactus, one kind is like swords and stick you like a needle.

The cactus with the round leaves that grow close to the ground with pins in them have yellow and pink flowers in the spring that look like wax. A weed that grows as tall as a man has flowers on it like orchids. There are every kind of wild flower in the world here.

Blue Carpet

The reason this place is called Larkspur is because the whole earth is covered with larkspur which is a blue flower, and so the earth looks as though it had a blue carpet on it.

You have to be very careful of forest fires here and the law of the ranch is close rules behind you and NEVER throw a lighted cigarette into the brush or anywhere. Everybody comes to put fires out.

Once lightning struck up on the Rocky Mountains that look down on this ranch and the men had to climb up for three hours and there wasn't any water and they had to go down to the trees and dig trenches around the fire to put it out.

When we have lightning here it is awful because we are one mile and a half up in the air and we are nearer the sky and it looks like big swords of fire coming to kill you. It burns up houses often here and lots of trees.

Once we were getting the milk in the car with Mamma and lightning came right down on us like a big flame, right all over us, and then thunder went off like an explosion and we all screamed and Mamma drove like she was crazyy through all the ditches and we ran into the ditches and were very scared and shaking.

K.C. Fights to Ban Spain Red Film

New York, April 17—A smashing attack on anti-fascist Spanish political motion pictures was launched by the Knights of Columbus here when steps were taken to bar from local screens the film, "Spain In Flames," now being distributed by Amkino, Soviet Russia's official film organization.

The leaders of six churches in The Bronx, whose parishes are near one of the theaters where the film has been booked, have agreed to ask their congregations to boycott the theater "while the film is being shown and hereafter" Mr. Shea reported, adding:

"In the past the Communists were so well organized, they always could get a hearing. We were not organized. After a year of preparation, we, too, are organized and will make our influence felt when Americanism is at stake. Our interests are the same as those of many of the national patriotic and veteran organizations. We want them to cooperate with us to defeat this motion picture screens clean. Their influence, particularly among young people, is too great to permit them being used as propaganda mediums."

VISITED THEATER

Clarence F. DeWitt, chairman of the board of district deputies of the Knights of Columbus, said that the campaign on to Americanize films is being conducted "with the sanction of the Catholic interests committee."

Mr. DeWitt has not seen the film "Spain in Flames," but Mr. Shea said:

"I visited one of the theaters at which it has been booked, and protested against it. I was told that 75 per cent of the truth about Spain and the war.' When I asked if it was a Communistic picture, I was told that 'Of course it is, because that's the only side that is the truth.'"

Mr. Shea, who is touchy with Knights of Columbus leaders in Brooklyn where the alleged Communistic drive in behalf of Spanish war also is booked for a showing next week. Veteran and patriotic organizations have been asked to lend their support to a move to have it banned there.

Red Despots Hit By Cardinal Hayes

Special to Boston Evening American

New York, April 17—Subversive influences that would destroy established institutions and set up a despotic state are assailed in a pastoral of Cardinal Hayes to be published today.

The pastoral, which will be read in the 371 churches of the Catholic archdiocese tomorrow in opening the annual Catholic Charities campaign for funds, warns against class hatred and calls for a "profound and widespread renewal of the Christian spirit." The Cardinal writes:

"The world needs today, as never before, the forts of strength of Christian lives. Subversive influences are busy at work in nation after nation seeking to destroy established institutions and to set up a despotic state.

"They exploit the privations and misery of the poor and lure men to destruction by miracles of promises of peace. They preach hatred and class war as the motive power of human progress.

"History tells us that such movements can lead only to the crushing of liberty and religion and the enslavement of men under economic despotism."

Patriots' Day

TOMORROW night at midnight one hundred and sixty-two years ago, Paul Revere made his famous ride from Charlestown to Lexington.

It was an event rich in historical significance.

It marked the beginning of the great War of the Revolution that was to end eight years later in George Washington's Proclamation of Peace.

It heralded the shot in Middlesex that forever sealed the doom of royalty in this land.

On Monday, therefore, we observe Patriots' Day and celebrate at once the birth of liberty and union.

Celebrating, we contemplate the trials, the sacrifices and the bravery of simple, heroic men.

Contemplating, we hear again, sounding through the years, the impassioned warnings of those patriot couriers.

Hearing, we become better citizens, truer Americans.

Monday should be a day for religious worship and civil rejoicing.

With our every act, we should pledge anew our love of country and thank God for the blessings that have come to us because of the valor of those who won our liberty and preserved our Union.

A Longer Life For All

THE fascinating prospect that the span of life may eventually be limited only by the wearing qualities of the human body has been raised by medical scientists.

It is already possible, according to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon-general of the United States, to add ten years to the average span of life by taking advantage of available medical science.

Professor Henry C. Sherman of Columbia University, adds the interesting thought that seven extra years may be picked up through sensible adjusting of diet.

There are, of course, only three CAUSES of death.

A man may die of injury, which is preventable if he is not careless or if other men are neither careless nor cruel.

He may also die of disease, which will be preventable when ignorance yields to knowledge.

But he will surely die, if not from one of these causes, then from OLD AGE.

Thoughtful men will wonder what they will DO with the extra years of life which science and caution may combine to place at their disposal.

That is a question medical scientists will not care to answer.

They will be satisfied to give mankind longer life. Men will have to decide for themselves how to make the best USE of it.

Proof From Spain

SPAIN, which has been the hapless proving ground for the implements of war developed by other nations, has produced interesting results.

Observers of recent trends in the Spanish war report that Russian planes are responsible for current loyalist successes.

To achieve that result, the Russian ships have demonstrated superiority over Italian and German ships.

That is something for Italy and Germany to worry about.

Here is something for America to THINK about.

The Russian fighting craft are said to be of American type, powered by motors of American design, similar to ships available to American defensive forces.

If this is true, America is designing and building the best military airplanes in the world.

But RUSSIA HAS THE PLANES.

These facts present both encouragement and WARNING to America.

They prove we are capable of being the SAFEST nation in the world.

But we are not achieving security by placing our resources of inventive genius and mechanical science at the disposal of foreign military powers.

Test of the Pudding

EACH month when the tabulation of America's foreign trade is prepared the question recurs as to whether Secretary Hull's so-called reciprocal trade pacts are helpful.

Since the program has been in effect, imports have been rising much more rapidly than exports.

The perennial favorable balance of trade, in which our exports exceed our imports, has been drastically reversed.

Even the ballyhoo about foreign war buying has not altered the deficits in international payments which this country is incurring as a result of current unaccustomed trade trends.

In February, the latest month for which figures are available, imports were 44 per cent larger than a year ago, whereas exports rose only 28 per cent.

For the first two months of the year, American imports exceeded American exports of merchandise by $63,826,000, whereas in the corresponding period a year ago there was an export balance of $331,000.

In addition, the United States imported a net excess of gold amounting to $241,651,000.

Thus, the chaotic international economic drama of 1936, in which the United States incurred a vast net deficit on movements of goods, services, and precious metals, is being re-enacted in 1937.

How long will the American people remain complacent while their national assets disappear?

Spare Boston Common

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, writing "Woodman, "Spare That Tree!" and saving the tree, ought to have written "Mr. Coyne, spare Boston Common."

We need that sort of plea today.

The irreverent woodchopper whom Poet Morris so successfully rebuked was content with felling one tree, an old one.

Representative Francis X. Coyne, more ambitious, would have several dozens of them, and, for good measure, would throw the world's most famous public ground into the woodpile.

He tells us:

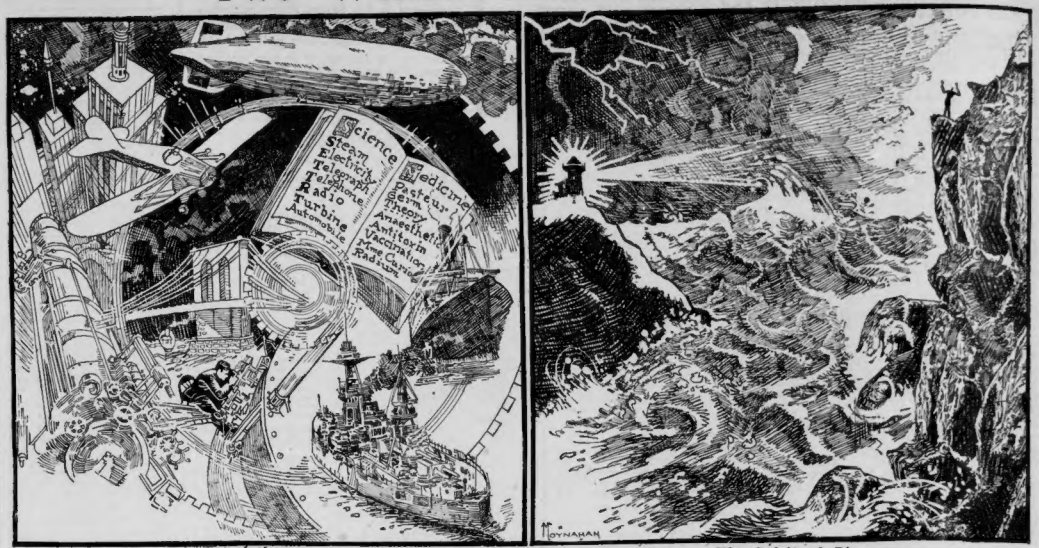
"There's space on Boston Common to park many thousands of automobiles. We should use it for that purpose."

He adds:

"No doubt the historical and patriotic societies will oppose my parking bill, prating about the sacredness of the Common."

The Representative is quite a prophet; the societies will, and very effectively,

Two Worlds: Man's and God's



The Material Giant

"Chaotic is a mild term by which to express the evil times the world has fallen upon.

"Man is apparently bewildered, if not lost spiritually, morally, intellectually, socially, in the labyrinths of his own creation.

"He intellectually is putting out the lights of heaven.

"The spirit of our day urges man to be a law unto himself, and how lawless he has become."

Patrick Cardinal Hayes,
ARCHBISHOP OF NEW YORK

At the left, we see man in the world that he has created. About him is his "civilization"—great structures that stand upon the land or roll along it, that soar among the clouds, that ride upon the seas.

Here is man the material giant.

To the right, we see man in the larger world of God's creation. Above, below and all around him are the forces of Nature—lightning that flashes, wild winds that destroy, wanton waves that drown, rocks that fall and crush.

There, bewildered, is man the spiritual pigmy.

* * *

The Bible tells us that man in the beginning was given "dominion over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth."

That was only the beginning; man has slowly achieved by the power of intelligence and the development of science an ever-increasing, but never complete, dominion over the powers of Nature, electricity, steam, waterfalls, lightning, distance itself.

Truly it was said, "It hath not yet been shewn what we shall be."

Science and the right use of brains begin to prove it.

But, extending his dominion and adding to his greatness, man is often guilty of forgetting his own record of progress and believing himself greater than he is, or ever can be.

Such a man doesn't grow; for him there is only mental stagnation.

The thinking man, the mentally growing man, knows that the universe outside of this little planet, to which gravitation holds us for a few years, is the only thing really important.

He realizes that for hundreds of thousands of years there was no organized intelligence on the earth; that, perhaps a million years ago, the first signs of mental activity developed in some low form of life.

Then, for hundreds of centuries, the animal called man lived more or less as other animals, "thinking" in a primitive way, and gradually improving.

* * *

The man who thinks, and consequently grows, knows that the cartoon reproduced above is but a development of the scratches that his ancestors made on cave walls ages ago to depict bisons and dinosaurs.

He tells himself that the marvelous flying machine is really only the newest chapter in the story of transportation progress that began when man, who started out on his own feet, rode on the backs of buffaloes, then on rude sledges dragged by tame animals, later on carts made possible by wheels, and still later on vehicles that propelled themselves.

He gladly admits that the battleship, the submarine and the great guns along the shores of nations are merely more effective versions of the Palaeolithic man's spear and that man is still the most deadly, vicious and remorseless representative of life on earth.

* * *

It is to be remembered, however, that man today is only twelve thousand short years from the Late Stone Age, in

The Spiritual Pigmy

And, if he has moved up as far as he has toward civilization in those 12,000 years, he will surely develop real civilization, free from intellectual bewilderment and brute hatreds, in the hundreds of thousands of years that this planet will last with human life upon it.

But strive though he may, man can never be "a law unto himself," never as long as the animal part of him survives, making it necessary for him to depend on a body.

The law of gravitation fastens him like a fly to his revolving globe, 25,000 miles around but only a speck of dust in infinite space.

The power of gravity attaches the earth to the sun around which we move, and unknown laws beyond the comprehension of man, keep it from going too near and turning to a molten mass or from drifting too far away and hardening into solid ice.

Mysterious, unbreakable laws control our very existence, and we plunge onward with our earth through space—WHITHER, WHY, WHENCE we cannot know.

* * *

The other man, on the cliff in the right picture, doesn't need it. He has found its truth, though probably too late.

We are finite beings in an infinite universe, little points of life in an eternity that never began and never can end.

We can only thank God for the brains that He has given us and understand that our machinery, science and inventive genius are His blessings.

And we spiritual pigmies, thanking God, should also ask Him to show us how to use and control the blessings and make them what they should be—THE SALVATION OF MANKIND.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 17—A letter to dog heaven: Dear Billy—I came across your badly chewed but favorite ball in a closet today and put it away quickly with a slight choke. It has been more than a year now since you went away and we miss you as much as ever.

I think it was largely because after great suffering you faced the Last Terror with such magnificent valour. A patient little sigh, a twitch of your nubbin tail, and it was all over. For several nights I walked the streets trying to get hold of myself. I wanted you back then as I do now.

I'd meet Terrence, the cop, who used to tickle you behind the ear, John, the Waldorf doorman, and others who knew you, and they'd inquire: "Where's Billy?" I'd have to shake my head and go rushing on. They looked at me strangely and then somehow they understood. They no longer ask but they miss you.

Your mistress packed most of your playthings, your harness, leashes, blankets and your water bowl "Pour le Chien" that we got at Rouen, and sent them to the homeless dogs at the Side Office. You were never selfish and I'm sure you would approve that.

I have been thinking of that dreadful misty night we arrived in Paris and the pink cheeked page boy in the tamborine cap took you out for an airing, and despite the warning took off your leash—and in your bewilderment you bolted. When he returned white-faced, holding the empty harness, it was the nearest I ever came to fainting.

Poor dear Billy lost in a fog in a strange city. For four frantic hours I searched and finally found you surrounded by a group of chattering, gesticulating Frenchmen at the Coty corner of the Place Vendome.

How you literally bounded into my arms with what seemed a human shriek of joy when you saw me and licked at my hands and face with your warm, wet tongue. Then you sank with a fit of exhaustion. All the rest of the night you did not move. I know, for I could not sleep.

Because you were deaf and so dependent, I suppose, you entwined our hearts more than the average dog. And left such an enormous gap. Mankind in its feeble gropings is always and for excellent reasons I firmly believe, puzzled by death. You know that some day all of us must learn. That is: What is on the other side? For dogs must have souls. So I believe.

I like to imagine you romping through lush Elysian fields jumping high like a rabbit, dodging now and then quizzically to look back and listen for familiar voices and footfalls. You certainly you will no longer be deaf in your Valhalla. Maybe all this is a foolish hope and maybe again it is not.

What seems once miraculous often becomes quite simple. With a twiddle of the dial we fill the room with the music of a British band. So who knows what strange wonders are wrought in the twinkling of an eye? I do not profess to know.

I only know I believe and none of the cynics have yet been able to shake that belief the slightest.

You will recall Ben Ali Haggin's dog Nimble that Ben Ali so thoughtfully gave us during the last few months of your earthly stay. You growled at one another at first and once or twice forgot mutual manners and the fur flew. But in a short time you were trotting off together, foraging for the same sniffs of fascinating odors.

Because you were old established, we kept Nimble in the back at night, but after you left he came in to occupy your bed and indulge your privileges. Like you, he is a thorough and thoughtful gentleman. He, like you, has never misplaced our confidence although he's a terribly leady cat about being left alone.

Nimble is not the cracker-jack dog Billy was. He's never been quite subject to the provisions of the law. Their employes know they have a right to organize for collective bargaining if they so desire.

It is a mistake to regard the Wagner Act as a cure-all for labor troubles and a guarantee against strikes. At best, it provides an orderly method for threshing out controversies and encourages the use of negotiation. As was pointed out by the Supreme Court, the Wagner Act does not compel an employer to hire, anyone and "permits a discharge for any reason other than union activity or agitation for collective bargaining."

The Wagner Act, unfortunately, was adopted to win the political support of labor leaders for the Administration rather than to Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Often, when the loneliness pressed too hard upon her and the clamor in her heart welled beyond all bearing, my little old-country mother would break through her usual silence and speak of "the bluebells of Ireland."

We children listened indifferently, being self-centered as all young creatures are. But now, looking back over the long years, the beauty of those episodes strikes me sharply

How lost she must sometimes have felt on that far west frontier—how cut off from the old, settled friendliness of her homeland! It had been a sweet land, that Ireland, in spite of the great storms that went stalking and snarling along its fanged shore . . . A land of deep, green moss, and hawthorn hedgerows, and daffodils tossing in bright, golden waves.

And now there was this rough, new place beside an alien sea, with savage earth which had known no gentling. No bloomy meadows or ferny glades . . . not even gracious trees to break the huge heave and lunge of the wild hills. Indian raids the pioneer men had faced.

But their dauntless, toiling wives faced something crueler far to bear. For them there was the long gnawing of loneliness . . . the choking hunger for gardens they would never see again.

Never do I hear a boast of California's gardens today but I remember how the first of them were watered with our homesick mothers' tears.

Yet seldom did our own mother let us see her openly grieving. Only sometimes, as I have said, when the ache grew too hard, she would step—as if through a door—into the past, and tell us of the hawthornes and daffodils, the primroses and wild roses.

Dearest of all . . . with the brogue burring warm on her tongue . . . she would speak of the blue bells of Ireland that hung themselves, in a sapphire tide, along the lanes, beneath the gnarled old trees.

How she loved those bluebells! And how the thought of them healed the hurt and hunger in her! Even as she spoke her eyes grew quieter, her smile softer—and something sang in her breast. And for hours after there would be a deeper peace and kindliness about the home. As if by touching that loved memory, she had been reborn . . . given fresh strength and tenderness and cheer to go on with her lonely trail.

And more and more, as I travel my own trail, I realize the quickening that lay in those brief interludes between the work and worry of her hard-pressed life.

For day-dreams in general I have scant patience.

GEMS OF THE SOUL

This modern existence which we have made for ourselves is an ugly, driven thing. We have so many possessions—so little real power or peace. Bonds of use, cause the employed and weariness, collect lovely objects—carvings, etchings, jewels. For most of us the cost of such things is too great and there is little comfort in them after all.

But any spirit may have its precious places set apart—

Places untouched by haste and hate, fear and envy and greed—

Like Irish meadows bright with bluebells—

Where sometimes the tired heart may slip away and rest . . . be healed of its hurt . . . gain speed and refreshed . . . and so come back, renewed for life's long trail.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

To the extent that they substitute certainty for uncertainty, the decisions upholding the Wagner Act are beneficial. Business and industry which are engaged in interstate commerce know they are subject to the provisions of the law. Their employes know they have a right to organize for collective bargaining if they so desire.

It is a mistake to regard the Wagner Act as a cure-all for labor troubles and a guarantee against strikes. At best, it provides an orderly method for threshing out controversies and encourages the use of negotiation. As was pointed out by the Supreme Court, the Wagner Act does not compel an employer to hire, anyone and "permits a discharge for any reason other than union activity or agitation for collective bargaining."

The Wagner Act, unfortunately, was adopted to win the political support of labor leaders for the Administration rather than to insure industrial peace. It is strictly a one-sided measure. It can be invoked ONLY by employes. It protects employes against coercion or intimidation by employers but leaves them wide open to coercion and intimidation by others.

It guarantees to employes the right of SELF-ORGANIZATION and selection of representatives for collective bargaining. But most of the organizing that is done is done by outsiders. Instead of employes organizing themselves, in many cases they are organized by professional organizers.

Now that the right of employes to bargain collectively has been wholly established, the responsibility of organized labor also should be established. In other words, any contract entered into between an employer and the majority of his employes should be equally binding upon both parties.

Employers are much more likely to be willing to negotiate working agreements if they have assurance such agreements will be kept.

Since the General Motors strike settlement agreement that there would be no more strikes, operation of the company has been interfered with by thirty strikes.

That these strikes were not authorized by the union does not remove the injury to the company. An organization which has authority to speak for a group of employes should have power to insure they will keep any agreement into which they enter and should be accountable for any failure to keep their word.

From Switzerland it is reported that the United States has pledged support to Egyptian efforts to abolish grants of special privileges to foreign governments. That sounds bad. This country has no business messing in Egyptian affairs. We can get into plenty of trouble attending to our own affairs.
